Leaders Summoned; Miners Vote To Hold Tridistrict Tie-up in Abeyance

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

As the Government moved toward a showdown with 17,000 striking Pennsylvania anthracite miners yesterday, the miners' tri-district committee, at Hazelton, Pa., last night voted to hold in abeyance, pending the outcome of conferences here today, a general strike in the three districts which had been set for tomorrow.

The Hazelton meeting, the Associated Press reported, named a committee of 15 to carry the miners' grievances to Washington, and adopted a resolution declaring that "satisfactory progress" must be reported by the committee at another meeting Sunday afternoon, with assurance that any wage increases granted would be retroactive to January 15.

Committee members were in receipt of telegrams from the War Labor Board summoning them to Washington today for a public hearing to explain why the 16-day strike is continuing in defiance of the national no-strike policy.

The War Labor Board's call which was sent also to representatives of the operators and to United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis was generally regarded as a major effort to persuade the men to go back to work before proceeding with possible "sanctions" to break the strike.

Lewis, Kennedy Expected

Lewis who has kept in the background of the dispute, which involves the miners' protest against a 50 cents a month dues increase and pressure for a $2-a-day wage increase, was expected to attend today's session along with UMW Secretary Treasurer Thomas Kennedy, who has been at Hazleton trying to persuade the miners to go back to work.

Kennedy is a labor member of WLB, but will not participate in the hearing as a board official.

A total of 90,000 workers are employed in the anthracite industry, but the strikers claim to control only 20,000 additional workers.

With developments on many fronts, the fast-moving strike picture added up as follows:

1. Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, who is also solid fuels coordinator for war, denounced the strike as "highly reprehensible and in reckless disregard of national welfare and the strikers' patriotic duties," and told a press conference that the Government ought to take over the mines if the strike is not settled.

2. Congressional criticism of the strike mounted with Representative Satterfield (Democrat) of Virginia branding the work stoppage "an unspeakable affront to the people of this country," and the Truman Committee calling an emergency session to keep informed of developments. Representative Colmer (Democrat) of Mississippi, introduced a bill to make strikers immediately eligible for military service.

3. An official of the United Mine Workers stated that Lewis has assured the War Labor Board and the Truman Committee that he's doing "everything possible" to end the strike.

4. Ickes called on home owners with hand-fired furnaces to

Catoe Dies Today In Electric Chair; No Stay in Sight

Jarvis Theodore Roosevelt Catoe, 38-year-old Negro, confessed slayer of six women, will die in the electric chair at the District Jail at 10 a. m. today.

Specifically, he will pay the supreme penalty for the rape-strangulation of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz, 28-year-old bride. She was choked to death, March 8, 1941, in her apartment at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Catoe admitted the murder after his arrest here, August 28, 1941, by local police and two New York City detectives. The latter traced him here while investigating the strangulation of Evelyn D. Anderson, 26, of New York, on August 4 of the same year.

In addition to the Abramowitz and Anderson crimes, Catoe also confessed killing Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23, War Department secretary; Ada G. Puller, 21, Negro; Mattie Stewart, 48, Negro, and Lucy Kidwell, 56, Negro.

At his trial in the Abramowitz death, the cab driver, who was once a police informer, repudiated his confessions and claimed police forced him to sign the admissions.

Little hope was held last night for a stay of execution. An appeal to the President was denied two weeks ago after Court of Appeals refused him a new trial.

Production Front

Nelson Sees Tough Sledding, But Says Goals Will Be Met

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday said the next four months would be critical for the country's "must" production programs, but predicted confidently that production schedules could be so arranged as to get them all "through" this year.

Specifically, he was referring to synthetic rubber, high octane gasoline, aircraft, escort vessels and merchant shipping programs, which have been in conflict to secure critical components needed to get them past the next four months.

Asked about reports that the rubber program was slated to get highest priorities on 55 per cent of its schedules, Nelson denied that a decision that one program was more important than another would be made, "anymore than one would say that water was more important to man than fire."

A decision on the status of the rubber program will be made "in a day or two," he said.

The critical components which are the current limiting factor of the five programs will be "allocated" among the different programs by Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson to take them over the current period, Nelson said.

He predicted that the country would be able to expand its production of critical components such as valves, heat exchangers, instruments, etc., before the year was over, ending up by putting all the programs across.

Nelson indicated that the conflicts were usually of an unforeseeable nature, but that as soon as they appeared, Wilson moved in, rearranging schedules and production plans until the bottlenecks were removed.

The prediction that the rubber program would receive authorization to schedule 55 per cent of its operation on the highest triple-A priority came from a reliable but unquotable production source. Other sources indicated that half the rubber program would be given this high rating.

Nelson said granting of high priorities to rubber would not necessarily hurt other programs, indicating their schedules were also being shifted. About 20 per cent of the rubber and high octane gasoline programs have already received the highest priority. Granting of additional priority to the rubber program would not actually put it ahead of the other programs, since properly balanced schedules would undoubtedly require granting of special priorities to the other programs as "bugs" appear in them, it was pointed out.

Rubber Director William M. Jeffers yesterday expressed the opinion that he could "bull" the pro-

Ickes Against Limiting Oil For Military

Plain Talk

Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes disclosed yesterday that he would prefer to first cut off all oil supplies to placer of amusement and nonwar industries before asking the Army and Navy to limit the amount of petroleum supplies they use for war purposes.

At a press conference yesterday, he reported that the East Coast oil situation was a bit easier, but that he was "keeping his fingers crossed, touching wood, and carrying a buckeye," against the possibility that it would turn bad again creating additional hardship this winter.

He also disclosed that he believes the situation will remain tight next winter and that additional oil brought in by pipeline will probably provide additional military rather than civilian requirements.

Goal Not Reached

Cuts in basic oil and gasoline rations have only saved an estimated 80,000 barrels a day of petroleum products, 59,000 barrels short of the 139,000 barrel goal he set several months ago. Approximately 15,000 to 20,000 barrels of this amount were saved by the recent ban on pleasure driving, an aide advised him at the conference.

Ickes' attitude in favor of giving complete primacy to military demands for petroleum supplies is significant in view of the fact that discussions are taking place among the Petroleum Administration for War, Office of Price Administration, and War Production Board to set up a priorities list for fuel oil consumers which would give first call to homes and war plants as far as civilian demands are concerned. Military demands probably will be left uncontrolled, although negotiations have been going on with the armed services to persuade them to hold their demands to absolute minimums.

To tighten controls over B and C gasoline ration book holders in the East, OPA directed that hereafter requests from them for more gasoline must go to the nearest district, State or regional OPA offices, rather than being handled by local rationing boards. The OPA offices were instructed not to allow more gasoline except in cases of "extreme hardship."

OPA anticipated many such requests because of the recent 25 per cent cut in the value of B and C coupons in the 17-State Eastern area.

French Take Tunisian Heights; Reds Pursue Foe in Caucasus After Fast 125-Mile Advance

Soviet Troops Smash Forward 26 Miles During 1 Day's Fighting

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Friday), Jan. 15.—The Red army rolling northward through the Caucasus now has advanced more than 125 miles, reaching Sotnikovskoye near the Kalmyck steppes, and Cossack cavalry and Red tank men are pursuing the still retreating Nazis, it was announced today.

The occupation of Sotnikovskoye, about 65 miles above the Mineralnye Vody-Rostov Railway, marked a 26-mile advance yesterday from the Zhuravskoye area to the south. It brought the Caucasus army within 45 miles of the Kalmyck region, where other Red army forces pushing southward from Stalingrad are operating.

Other Soviet columns operating in the Kalmyck Republic were driving steadily westward after crossing the lower Volga River at the beginning of their offensive.

(Earlier in the week Reuters reported that Soviet forces sweeping across the Kalmyck Steppes had joined with other Red army units in the Levokumsky area east of Sotnikovskoye.)

In their strides yesterday the Red army operating along the Mineralnye Vody-Rostov Railway toward Armavir seized Suvorovskaya, 15 miles northwest of Mineralnye Vody, the communique said. They also took the railway station of the same name as well as the settlement of Grazhdansky-Pervy, 20 miles west of Mineralnye Vody.

Along the Don River at the northern end of the Caucasus the Russians were beating off repeated Nazi counterattacks which cost the enemy 1000 dead and 22 tanks yesterday, the communique said. The Red Army is operating only 60 miles east of Rostov, and appar-

Drive to Relieve Leningrad Reported

London (Friday), Jan. 15 (AP).—Stockholm reports said today that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, whose movements have been carefully guarded in the last month, had launched an offensive to relieve besieged Leningrad.

The Russians themselves did not offer any confirmation of this report, but British military observers said it seemed a logical step to divert Germ troops.

For several days the Germans have reported Russian attacks southeast of Lake Ilmen in the Leningrad zone. On two occasions this winter the Germans have announced Soviet drives before Moscow d'd.

Giraud May Fight First, Parley Later

British Deny U. S. Rivalry In Attempts to Unify French

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 14.—The British Minister of Information, Brendan Bracken, declared today that the United States and Britain were striving to get Gen. Henri Giraud and Gen. Charles de Gaulle together to dispel French political friction and denied that the two governments, in Washington and London, were working at cross purposes.

"Neither the British nor American Government is backing any particular candidate for leadership of the French," said Bracken, an intimate of Prime Minister Churchill.

"The British Foreign Office is not backing de Gaulle (leader of the Fighting French) and the Washington State Department is not backing General Giraud (high commissioner for North and West Africa.)

"The British government gave power of attorney to (Lieut. Gen. Dwight D.) Eisenhower and has the greatest possible confidence in him and is backing him to the utmost."

His remarks were made at a conference with American newspapermen at a time when individual British, American and Russian attitudes and policies toward the French African muddle had reached a point at which Allied solidarity was endangered seriously.

Some concrete action to dispel the confusion and mistrust in the public mind may be expected very soon. It may take the form of the creation of a joint political body to administer the internal affairs of North Africa until the military problem is solved. Or it might cause another visit of Mr. Churchill to Washington for a strong reaffirmation of Allied unity of purpose. Such a trip by the Prime Minister has been rumored for some time.

"Tunisia is the best place to fight the Hun and we are anxious to get on with the job so we can open a second front somewhere on the Continent of Europe," Bracken said. "Both our governments realize a second front will require enormous sacrifices of manpower and we are prepared for it."

He declared the Count of Paris, pretender to the French Throne

Weather in Africa Restricts Action; LeClerc Reported Mopping Up Fezzan

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Jan. 14.—A French attack northwest of Kairouan, traffic junction below Tunis, drove the Germans from two strategic heights in the mountains, a French spokesman announced today.

Bad weather limited Allied air and ground activity over other fronts, and temporarily checked the aerial offensive from the west against Marshal Rommel's army in Tripolitania.

The heights seized yesterday by the French—Jebel Haoub and Jebel Bou Davouss, about 15 miles northwest of Kairouan—were said by the spokesman to be important gains.

"The Lafayette Escadrille went into action for the first time with French forces," he added, referring to the new organization of veteran French fliers equipped with American planes.

80 Italians Taken

Also in an area northwest of Kairouan, French troops took an Axis position, capturing 80 Italian prisoners, after having surrounded an Axis group there two days ago. A nearby Morocco division killed 17 Nazis and captured 8 in a local skirmish.

(British news dispatches reported that contact had been established between the headquarters of General Giraud, French commander in Tunisia, and the Fighting French force under Brig. Gen. Jacques Le Clerc which is thrusting upward across Libya from Equatorial Africa.

(It was added that this liaison—the first between De Gaullists and Giraud in the current phase of the African war — had been accomplished by the arrival at Giraud's headquarters of a courier from Le Clerc.

(At the eastern end of the Allied line in North Africa, airmen flying in support of the British Eighth Army attacked Axis airfields near Misurata along the Libyan coast, machine-gunned motor transport in both western Libya and Tunisia, bombed the Tunisian port of Sousse and damaged a cargo ship off Tunisia. Four German planes were shot down and others damaged. Eight Allied planes were lost.)

The day's communique from General Eisenhower's eadquarters reported light air activity, adding that one enemy fighter had been shot down without Allied loss and that two enemy bombers were destroyed last night.

Le Clerc's Drive

(Fighting French in London reported Le Clerc messaged that his forces had captured more than 700 prisoners and "considerable stores of arms, ammunition and equipment —including 18 Axis tanks and 40 guns—during their drive across the Fezzan area of the Libyan Desert.)

The British navy was officially credited at Algiers with successfully escorting 971 transports, supply ships and other vessels totaling about 7,600,000 tons between Gibraltar and North African ports in the last two months.

These convoys coming from the United States and Britain, were made up of merchantmen of all the

Anaconda Wire Concern Indicted

The Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. of Pawtucket, R. I., and five individuals were indicted at Providence, R. I., yesterday on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government and present false claims in connection with wire and cable provided for the American and British armies.

It was the second company controlled by Anaconda Copper Mining Co. to be charged with supplying defective wire and cable to the Government. The Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. of Marion, Ind., was indicted on similar charges several weeks ago.

D. C. Motorists Cooperating On Driving Ban

Only 20 Reported As Violators in Latest OPA Check

Washington motorists are apparently beginning to take OPA's recent order banning pleasure driving seriously, with a total of 20 drivers cited for violations yesterday by OPA inspectors. This number is less than half the 48 reported Wednesday and brings the total to date to 315.

Yesterday was also the first day that OPA had received no reports of violations from the Metropolitan Police.

District OPA Director Whitney Leary said this decreased number of violations did not mean his inspectors were relaxing their vigilance but that local drivers were becoming reconciled to the restriction.

OPA officials said notifications for appearance before the rationing boards of alleged violators would be mailed out at least three days prior to the scheduled hearing.

A crowd of downtown Washington pedestrians believed they had struck pay dirt Wednesday when they spotted Secretary of the Interior Ickes' car parked in front of a newsreel theater. However their hopes of giving expression to what must have been on their minds were dashed when Ickes emerged from a broadcasting studio next door to the theater.

'I Travel Because People Ask Me To,' Says First Lady

Red Bank, N. J., Jan. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had a prompt answer today for a reporter who asked if she did not feel she should "stop gadding about" since the Office of Price Administration had curtailed driving in the gasoline shortage.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she traveled "because I am asked to do these things by people of various organizations."

She added:

"As long as I make enough money by writing 'My Day' (a newspaper column) to pay my own expenses, I feel justified in going to as many meetings and doing as many things as I am asked to do—as many things as I can do."

Wheeler, Nye Deny They Fear Nazi Evidence

Seek Plot Trial Probe For Sake of Justice, Pair Tell Senators

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Senators Nye and Wheeler—who want Congress to investigate the current Nazi conspiracy case—took the Senate floor yesterday to deny they were afraid the evidence in the conspiracy trial would embarass them.

The case involves 34 defendants who are accused of joining a German official in a plot against the United States armed forces. Both the Senators said the methods of the prosecutors were a threat to liberty, and that this was what they worried about.

Wheeler said he wrote his letters of protest to Attorney General Biddle to get Biddle to investigate "the rumors which were going around in reference to the handling of the grand jury." Wheeler did not tell the 20-odd Senators in the chamber who was spreading the rumors.

Nye Also Heard Rumors

Nye said he and other Senators had heard "reoresentation of alleged practices before the grand jury which left one wondering concerning the issue of personal liberty." Nye did not say who he heard the representation from.

Nye began by attacking Dr. Gerhart Seger, once an anti-Nazi Reichstag member and now a refugee, for saying pro-Nazi sentiment was strong in Nye's home State of North Dakota. The Senator then turned to a statement which appeared in Drew Pearson's syndicated column, "Washington Merry Go Round," in The Post on January 13. Pearson wrote that Nye was active "behind the scenes" in aiding the appeal of the jailed German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, who is one of the 34 defendants in the seditious conspiracy case.

Nye said this was "a deceitful falsehood, a lie."

"I never but once or twice in my life have talked with Mr. Viereck," Nye declared. "I have not seen or had any contact with Mr. Viereck in many, many months." He said the last time the German agent came to his office was a year before Pearl Harbor and that on this occasion Viereck "was abruptly rebuffed."

The North Dakotan called Theodore Hoffman, head of the Steuben Society, "one of the finest American citizens it has been my pleasure to know." Hoffman was a witness be-

Leaders Seek Ability

House Committee on District Being Selected Carefully

A compact, highly efficient and hard-working House District Committee is in prospect for the Seventy-eighth Congress, it was learned yesterday, with the disclosure that leaders of both parties are carefully combing the ranks of their new members to find the ablest and best fitted men for it.

A sharp contrast with former years, which often saw unwilling freshmen members placed on the local committee because there was no place else to put them, the care being taken now results from a realization on the part of the leadership of the importance of legislation pertaining to the wartime Capital.

Following this realization through, each party has named a special group to select new members for the District Committee.

With the Democrats, this has taken the form of a subcommittee of the majority Ways and Means Committee membership, which is handling Democratic committee assignments. A similar group is acting for the Republican Committee on Committees.

Two things have already been agreed upon:

1. Representative Jennings Randolph of West Virginia will continue to serve as chairman, and Representative Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois will continue as ranking Republican member. These are the only two assignments definite as yet.

2. The size of the committee, at the suggestion of Randolph and Dirksen, will be reduced from 21

Essen Blasted With 100 Tons Of Bombs

Planes Saturate Krupp Works Area; 4 Bombers Are Lost

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 14.—Heavy R. A. F. bombers unleashed a veritable cloudburst of fire and explosives upon much-bombed Essen last night in a supersaturation raid which saw 100 tons of bombs hit the home city of the Krupp works in 12 minutes.

The British said four bombers were lost in the concentrated attack, the eighth time in 11 nights that the R. A. F. has bombed Germany.

Both British and American planes carried out fighter sweeps by daylight today. The United States Eighth Air Force reported that its planes shot down two Nazi Focke-Wulf 190s near Ostend, Belgium; hit a small coastal steamer with cannon fire, and shot up two passenger trains near Dixmude, Belgium. All American planes returned safely.

On Essen, British bombs cascaded down at an average of eight and one-third tons every minute.

Returning pilots reported that large fires quickly mushroomed up. They said that the German anti-aircraft fire was as violent as ever and that for the first time in recent nights they encountered Nazi night fighters.

Raids Stepped Up

To illustrate just how the R. A. F. has developed the principle of saturating a target with death-dealing missiles, it was recalled that 340 tons of bombs were dropped in three hours, or less than 2 tons per minute, in the first such raid, which was on Luebeck last March 26.

The Germans acknowledged that the main target of the British last night was Essen and that the population suffered losses.

"Damage was done predominantly to buildings," the German high command communique said.

Torpedo Boats Rout Jap Destroyers

Enemy Relief Force Is Beaten Back From Guadalcanal

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Swift little motor torpedo boats of the American Pacific Fleet have driven a force of Japanese destroyers from Guadalcanal waters following a close-range night battle in which two and perhaps three enemy warships were damaged.

Reporting on this latest sea fight in the Solomons, the Navy said it occurred the night of January 10-11 and that the Nipponese force "retired to the northwest" after receiving at least three and possibly five torpedo hits.

The deadly 80-foot speedboats rammed home their "fish" as the Jap warships were attempting to supply their hard-pressed troops on Guadalcanal, it was evident.

There was no indication in the Navy communique as to whether any supplies were put ashore from the destroyers before they were attacked by the Guadalcanal "mosquito" fleet. It is possible, however, that some badly needed food might have been landed or dropped in the water and washed ashore in the darkness.

The communique also reported new advances for the American troops ashore on Guadalcanal in their new offensive against the Japs on the western end of the island. Launched Sunday, the attacks have been limited in scope so far and confined to wiping out enemy outposts and rather small advances.

On Wednesday (Solomons time) our ground forces, supported by airmen, "continued their advance," was all the communique said. Military men here, however, say that the American offensive operations so far this week have been rather small-scale, though it is possible heavy attacks may follow.

The same day Martin medium bombers, with Airacobra and Lightning fighter support, bombed the Jap seaplane base at Rekata Bay, in the middle Solomons, 135 miles

Democrats Concerned

House Leaders Call Session To Plan War-Spending Scrutiny

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Concerned over reports of excessive spending by the War and Navy Departments in the prosecution of the war, House Democratic leaders yesterday laid plans to keep the Federal agencies under constant scrutiny for the next two years.

Broad authority for the House Military and Naval Committees to conduct either joint or separate investigations of the war progress will be voted, Chairman Adolph Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois, of the House Rules Committee told the Chicago Sun.

"I have called a meeting of the Rules Committee for Monday to approve a resolution by Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia, of the Naval Affairs Committee, for an investigation by the Military and Naval Committees," Sabath said.

"The investigation will be made with a view to determining whether the departments are expediting the war and whether they are operating efficiently and economically."

Speaker Sam Rayburn is behind the investigation.

Reports reaching Congress of huge outlays for Government buildings, lands and other projects far in excess of original allocations have concerned the leadership and the Democratic chieftains want to keep a "watchdog" inquiry going to avert any war or post-war scandals

Chinese Retake Two Towns In Honan

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Jan. 14.—The Chinese high command tonight announced the reoccupation of the Honan Province towns of Kwangshan and Loshan and declared hat Chinese troops fiercely attacking the Japanese within the City of Sinyang and its environs had made progress.

The Chinese communique said Kwangshan was recaptured January 11 and Loshan was taken the next day. Loshan is 28 miles east of Sinyang, important Japanese base in southern Honan Province, and Kwangshan is 25 miles southeast of Loshan.

A Chinese army spokesman earlier today amended last night's official announcement that Sinyang had been captured He said that the Chinese are not in complete possession but are fighting within the city's walls after penetrating the west gate.

The spokesman said the Chinese had occupied two road junction towns above the Yangtze River in Anhwei Province. These were Tungchengh, 30 miles nortl of Anking, the Japanese-occupied provincial capital, and Tsienshan, an equal distance west of Anking.

The Chinese said "sanguinary fighting" is in progress on the Yunnan-Burma border area, with the Chinese stoutly resisting the Japanese and heavy losses being suffered by both sides.

War Sidelights

More Troops Reach Britain From America

Lodon, Jan. 14 (INS). — Another huge contingent of American and British Dominion troops has arrived in the British Isles, it was announced today.

American troops of all branches, New Zealand, Australian and Canadian fleet air arm and Royal Air Force personnel were included in the contingent, which made the Atlantic crosssing "without incident," it was disclosed.

Rendezvous by U-Boat

Stockholm, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Berlin correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet reported today that Admiral Karl Doenitz of the Nazi navy had made a 19-day trip in a submarine around the African cape to keep a rendezvous with Admiral Osami Nagano, chief of the Japanese naval staff board, at sea off Madagascar.

During its trip, the Germans claimed, the U-boat sank an 8000-ton American merchant ship off Cape Town. (Presumably the Japanese naval leader was able to reach the rendezvous in a surface warship.)

607 Planes Downed

London, Jan. 14 (INS).—A total of 607 enemy planes were destroyed or damaged during 1942 by the air arm of the British fleet and anti-aircraft gunners of the merchant navy, the Admiralty announced tonight. Of this, total, 339 were destroyed. These fighter do not include enemy plane bagged by the ship's gunners during North African operations.

China Supplies Small

London, Jan. 14 (AP).—Dr. K. C. George Yeh, London director of the Chinese Ministry of Information, said today that war supplies reaching China are "ridiculously small."

"When the road was open there were other channels by which supplies were reaching China—some secret, some official," he said. "Heavy equipment did not reach China by the Burma Road, and is not reaching China today."

Fourth War Year Reich's Worst, Says Goebbels

Lisbon, Jan. 14 (AP).—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels is quoted in a D. N. B. dispatch to the Lisbon press as holding that, in the fourth year of war, "Germany is facing a mission infinitely harder and more difficult than that she faced in 1939."

"We are fighting on the Eastern Front against a system that has turned war into 'total war' and has improved the war to an extent which reaches barbaric cruelties," D. N. B. said the Nazi propaganda minister wrote in the newspaper Das Reich.

("Total war" was in the first place an Axis idea.)

"The time will come when we shall be able to show our superiority over the Bolsheviks' assault against us, but it is important not to exhaust our own potential."

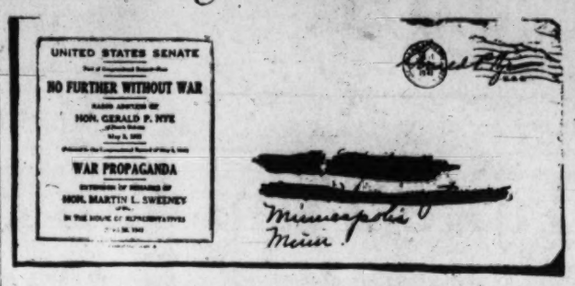
Among Our Souvenirs



WHEN Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, was working for the German agent, Viereck, in the Capital, Hill had the Government Printing Office get out 25,000 copies of this isolationist item, and 25,000 of Nye's franked envelopes to carry it through the mails. Hill placed the order May 5, 1941 fore the grand jurors who indicted the 34 alleged conspirators. Of their prosecution, Nye had this to say:

"I would not deny for one moment that I entertain grave doubts concerning the merit of the charges. . . . I submit that as respects the indictment returned against most of those involved in this alleged conspiracy they are no more guilty of conspiracy than I am, have seemingly done nothing more than I and others of us here have done time and time again."

Wheeler, too, had a name for Pearson. He called him a skunk, as well as a liar. Wheeler's chief concern, however, was a recent article in The Post about his frank being among those used on isolationist propaganda mailed out by Charles B. Hudson, a co-defendant with Viereck in the conspiracy case. Hudson runs an anti-Roosevelt, anti-war, anti-British bulletin in Omaha, Nebr.

"It's a Lie," He Says

"I rose merely to brand the statement which appeared in The Post, written by Mr. Stokes, as a deliberate falsehood," Wheeler explained.

"That is just a plain, unadulterated lie," Wheeler told the Senate. "Let me show you why it is a lie."

He declared he never had met Hudson and that as a matter of fact the Omaha agitator once accused him of "making known to the military authorities" that isolationist speeches were being mailed to men in the armed forces during the controversy over extending the Selective Service Act. Wheeler said he wrote to Hudson and denied he told the authorities about the speeches. He also childed Hudson for his propaganda.

Turning back to the conspiracy prosecution, Wheeler asked as others have:

"Where do Stokes and The Washington Post get their information, the information which they have been spreading about the evidence in the case, and about what is going to be said about Senators and Representatives? Where do they get it? Where did they get their information which was published in The Washington Post as to what was taking place in the grand jury room? How did they get it? If it had been before almost any other District Court in the United States they would have been hauled up for contempt of court for publishing what was going on and what was said before the grand jury. But here in Washington nothing was said about it and nothing was done about it."

Wheeler concluded with an apology to the Senate "for having taken up so much of its time in saying anything about these two disreputable persons."

Revised League Of Nations Asked By Lloyd George

London Friday), Jan. 15 (AP).—David Lloyd George, British premier in the first World War, declared today that the League of Nations, "a very good idea," should be reconstructed on different lines after the war and should have the backing of an international police force.

Lloyd George, who will celebrate his eightieth birthday Sunday on his quiet Surrey farm, told the London Daily Herald that the "League was ruined by America's refusal to come in—I am not sure that the failure of the United States to honor her treaty was not responsible for the present war—by the imperialism of France and then by sheer stupidity."

Kaiser Launches 123d Freighter As Probe Lags

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 14 (AP).—The National Labor Relations Board inquiry into unfair labor practices against three Kaiser shipyards contrasted sharply today with the speed with which Kaiser builds ships.

While the hearing struggled through legal technicalities, protests and bickering, one of the three yards involved—Oregon Shipbuilding—yesterday launched its 123d Liberty freighter.

The C. I. O. has charged the Kaiser firm with fostering A. F. of L. shipyard unions and entering into unfair closed-shop contracts with them without certification elections.

So far only one witness has been on the stand in the four days of hearing—Jack Murray, personnel manager of the three yards—and he did nothing more than identify records submitted as testimony.

Fleeing Nazi Prisoner Shot Dead by Rancher

Roswell, N. Mex., Jan. 14 (AP).—A German prisoner of war was killed, another wounded and a third captured last night by an Artesia rancher who surprised them at his ranch home after their escape from the Roswell internment camp, Col. Murray F. Gibbons, camp commandant, reported today.

Colonel Gibbons said he had been informed that Fanning surprised the men as they were tampering with his car during the night. After sending his wife for help, Fanning shot when the trio tried to bolt.

ently is meeting its heaviest opposition in this sector because of the obvious threat to that Nazi communications hub.

The Russians did not claim any specific towns in this sector, but again announced they were wearing down the Germans in men and equipment in steady fighting and gaining ground, too.

On the central front, the communique said, 500 more Germans fell in unsuccessful Nazi counter-attacks southwest of Velikie Luki which has been the scene of a long exhausting struggle in the snow.

In the Stalingrad area, where the remnants of 22 Nazi divisions still are fighting against a Russian ring thrown around their positions between the Don and Volga Rivers, the communique said 26 more Nazi transport planes were destroyed on Wednesday.

The Germans for weeks now have been flying in supplies on these battered units.

Nazis Report New Drives

Russian communiques and dispatches said nothing of new Red offensives reported by the Germans in the Voronezh sector midway between Stalingrad and Moscow and in the Lake Ilmen region south of Leningrad. Russian policy has been to conceal news of any new drive until it had achieved considerable success.

116 Japs Slain In 2-Day Fray Near Salamaua

By W. T. Yarbrough

Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Friday), Jan. 15.—Allied jungle fighters counted 116 dead Japanese today and beat the bushes for more bodies after a surprise two-day foray against Mubo, inland from Salamaua, and 12 miles to the south, in New Guinea.

Continuing rainy weather kept fighting down to a minimum on the Sananandа front, but the enemy is being nudged back by patrol activity. Sanananda is the only point in all the Papuan Peninsula where remnants of a Jap army which once totaled 15 000 still is holding out.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's bombers and fighters maintained their daily pressure on Japanese landing strips and Bivouac areas, striking along the New Guinea coast from Sanananda to Madang.

The heaviest raid was aimed at Lae where the Japanese made no attempt to interfere while Mitchell bombers, escorted by Lightnings, started big fuel fires along the shore. Absence of Jap aerial opposition was in sharp contrast with last week when the enemy sent over swarms of planes in an attempt to provide cover for a reinforcing naval convoy and, for their pains, suffered the loss or damage of more than 138 planes.

In the Salamaua sector, a force of Bostons made 16 strafing runs over some enemy troops which might have been remnants of a recent attempted landing at Mambare or stragglers from Allied-conquered Gona.

EarthquakeShakes New England; Damage Slight

Ossipee, N. H., Jan. 14 (AP).—The six New England States were shaken late today by a distinct earthquake shock, the second experienced in the Ossipee area in a little more than two years.

While the greatest strength of the tremor came in this area and throughout Carroll County, shocks were reported in Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut and barely noticeable disturbances in scattered sections of Rhode Island and Vermont.

Homes and buildings were noticeably shaken in the New Hampshire area and from other States came reports from houses that dishes on shelves had rattled and pictures had been shaken on walls.

Gunmen Stop Army Courier, Scan Official Papers, Flee

By the Associated Press

North Kingstown, R. I., Jan. 14.—Four men who held up an unarmed Army dispatch rider at gunpoint and rifled through official Army papers, only to return them with the remark that "it isn't here," still were at large today despite a State police dragnet.

There was no indication of what the men were seeking in their mysterious foray, nor any clue to their identity.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation declined comment, but it was learned from a reliable source that investigators did not believe espionage agents were involved.

The men forced the soldier, Pvt. Raymond L. Mosher of Springfield, Mass., to drive his small Army truck for more than a mile, a gun at his head, to a secluded lane where they carefully examined the documents. Then they sped away in a small sedan.

Police Lieut. Joseph Marceau at Wickford said Mosher told him the men approached him at a stop sign. One of the men whipped out a gun and climbed into the front seat beside the soldier.

The second man, and two others who appeared from beside the road, jumped into the back of the truck.

Asking the soldier whether he was armed, and receiving the reply that he was not, the man with the gun ordered Mosher to drive to a lonely lane.

As he drove in, Mosher noticed a small black sedan.

The men opened the truck's glove compartment and thumbed through Army papers. Then they ordered Mosher not to move, jumped into the sedan and drove out of the lane.

Mosher gave chase in his truck, but could not overtake them.

Nazis Muster Army Rejects

Stockholm, Jan. 14 (AP).—Faced with mounting casualties and growing demands on new fronts, the Germans are making a stern effort to mobilize every available reserve by mustering into the army men previously rejected for military service, reliable diplomatic sources said today.

A commission of high German army officers, these sources declared, is touring the Reich to comb out the last of the nation's manpower — men previously pronounced unfit for active service for slight disabilities but who could be used as garrison troops in occupied countries or for desk work, thus releasing more able-bodied men for the front.

Brewster Enters Debate on Flynn

'Qualifications' Are Important, Senator Reminds Bridges

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire yesterday formally submitted to the Senate the four charges upon which he based his demand for Senate rejection of President Roosevelt's nomination of Edward J. Flynn as Minister to Australia.

In the midst of a vitriolic attack on the Democratic National Committee chairman, however, Bridges was urged by a Senator from his own party to keep in mind the "broader question" of whether Flynn is "affirmatively qualified" for the "important and delicate position."

Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine, interrupted Bridges' recitation of his charges on the Senate floor to state:

Implications On Past

"I shall not prejudice the situation . . . but I shall assume that the Senator from New Hampshire does not mean to preclude . . . the far more serious question of in what particular way he (Flynn) is affirmatively qualified for the important and delicate position of Minister to Australia.

"I hope no implications on Mr. Flynn's past difficulties will blind us to this broader question."

Chairman Connally of the Foreign Relations Committee, arose a short time later to assure Bridges that the committee not only would receive the charges this morning and give them "proper attention," but would not act on the Flynn nomination "in advance of a hearing."

Connally sarcastically described Bridges' attack as a "calm and temperate dissertation." Referring to the New Hampshire Senator's announcement of his charges at a press conference Wednesday, he criticized him for "trying" his case in the newspapers.

"Blacksmith Shop Trial"

As an oldtime "country" lawyer, Connally said, he liked to try his cases in the courthouse. Making the best possible use of his Southern drawl and his Texas wit, Connally quickly had the galleries laughing.

It was fun, but unprofessional, "to try cases in the blacksmith shop or the livery stable—that is the favorite place—where you can cuss all you want and spit tobacco and call Mr. Jones a so-and-so."

"The Senator from New Hampshire is welcome to attend the meeting," Connally said. "We'll hear him and look over everything he brings. We'll make him comfortable and we have sanitary facilities in the committee room where he can dispose of any bucket of slop he may have."

Bridges flushed angrily at this and cried:

"There won't be any bucket of slop unless Flynn's there in it."

Bridges charged that Flynn, through the law firm of Goldwater and Flynn, represented a "Mr. Serge Rubinstein, who at the time of his retainer with Flynn had large Japanese interests" and who "was closely associated with one Guiji Kassai, who was a registered agent of the Japanese government and was in this country until two weeks before Pearl Harbor."

As this charge was made to reporters Wednesday, Flynn was accused of personally representing Rubinstein, who, in New York, has asserted that he has had no interests in Japan for a long time.

Bridges also linked Flynn with investment of large amounts of city funds in the State Title and Mortgage Co. of New York, accused him of selecting the late Dutch Schultz, notorious gangster, to be a deputy sheriff in Bronx County, and charged impropriety in the handling of the grand jury that failed to indict Flynn in the paving block scandal.

Connally last night announced that Bridges will be heard by the Foreign Relations Committee at an open session this morning, starting at 10:30 o'clock.

'Inexcusable'

U. S. Agency Accused in Barge Delay

The Defense Plant Corp., subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., yesterday was charged in the Senate with partial responsibility for "inexcusable" delay in carrying out a program, approved by President Roosevelt, for acquisition of a fleet of barges for transporting petroleum to the oil-short East Coast.

The charges was made in an interim report on a series of interagency negotiations that blocked, for six months after the program was approved at the White House, acquisition of all but four of 259 barges projected for conversion into oil carriers.

The report was made to the Senate by Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, on behalf of the special committee investigating the war program which is headed by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri.

Financial Restrictions

The Office of Defense Transportation, said the report, blamed the delay on "financial and other restrictions imposed by the Defense Plant Corp., which made it difficult to use available shipyard capacity."

"Late in November," declared the report, unanimously approved by the committee, War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson called on Jesse Jones, RFC head and Secretary of Commerce, "either to modify the contract restrictions or to proceed by letters of intent." At the same time, the report said, Nelson instructed ODT Chief Joseph B. Eastman to take "drastic steps to increase petroleum deliveries by barge."

Nelson also, the report went on, instructed the chairman of his WPB requirements committee, Ferdinand Eberstadt, to "take the barge program personally in hand."

Barge Program Cut

It was in August, however, less than a month after the President's approval of a barge program submitted by a special committee of top Government officials, that the requirements committee, not then headed by Eberstadt, cut the barge conversion program from 259 to 130 barges.

The committee also, the report declared, decided to hold "in abeyance" other phases of the program which called for construction of 500 wooden barges, 100 wooden-hull tugboats and 20 steel-hull river towboats.

The program was then designed to so increase use of intercoastal and inland East Coast oil deliveries by an estimated 150,000 barrels a day.

Basis of Steel Shortage

The requirements committee acted on the basis of the steel shortage and a report from the Navy Department's Bureau of Ships that no Diesel engines would be available for barge motive power before April, 1943.

The decision on Diesel engine supplies was taken, charged the report, without consultation with WPB's Diesel engine section which, when "finally" consulted, reported that not only were suitable Diesels available, but steam engines and boilers as well.

The Truman committee charged "unneccessary delay and confusion" in the barge program. It said the delay was "inexcusable."

The young woman, a resident of a fashionable Park Avenue hotel for women, was found unconscious last night on a Harlem rooftop. Miss Hudson was said to have told police that she remembered nothing after she went for a walk in Central Park.

Frances Farmer Floors Guard, Defies Judge, but Goes to Jail

IN CONTRAST—Two views of Frances Farmer, once glamorous film star, whose liking for drink has wrecked a meteoric career in record time. At left—Miss Farmer as she appeared in the days of her stage and screen success only a year ago. At right—The actress as she was brought to jail in Santa Monica, Calif., for violating probation in a drunk-driving case

By the Associated Press

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 14. The tempestuous Hollywood career of Frances Farmer came to a new and violent climax today as the actress, looking anything but glamorous, started a six months' jail term.

The comely blonde, a university graduate who once won a hometown newspaper's popularity contest and a trip to Russia as a reward, was sentenced for violating probation in a drunk-driving case.

In court, she told the judge she had been drinking "everything I could get."

Then, as she was waiting in the matron's office for removal to jail, she asked to use the telephone. Denial set off a melee in which one husky officer was floored, the matron and another officer bruised, and Miss Farmer herself battered somewhat before the law restored order and removed her shoes to prevent additional damage.

"Have you ever had a broken heart?" she screamed as she was carried away.

There was no other hint of the reason behind the demonstration. She was divorced last June from Actor Leif Erikson.

She finally began serving her term, after haughtily telling the desk sergeant who asked her occupation:

"I'm an actress, hadn't you heard?"

Her eyes were bloodshot, her blonde hair was straggling, her blue suit was mussed as she walked into Police Judge Marshall Hickson's court this morning. A warrant had been issued for her arrest January 6, after she had failed to pay the remaining half of a $250 fine assessed in October for drunk-driving in a dimout zone.

"Since you appeared in this court December 24," Judge Hickson asked, "have you had anything to drink?"

"Yes," she shouted, "I drank everything I could get, including benzedrine."

"You were advised," the judge declared, "that if you took one drink of liquor or failed to be a law-abiding citizen . . ."

"What," she interrupted, "do you expect me to do? I get liquor in my orange juice—in my coffee. Must I starve to death to obey your laws?"

The actress' arrest cost her the lead in a new film. Director Frank King said she was being replaced by Mary Brian.

Record Ban Laid at Door Of 'Interests'

By the Associated Press

Joseph A. Padway, counsel for the American Federation of Musicians, cited a medley of grievances against "rich" corporate interests yesterday in defense of the union's ban on recording music.

He also told a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee that union hiring halls are crowded with musicians seeking jobs and that while some dance bands complained of inability to find musicians, they wanted "young, attractive musicians with glamour, perhaps because of the romance of the dance."

He reiterated a statement made yesterday by President James C. Petrillo that the executive board of the union would meet in New York February 1 to draw up a list of demands upon broadcasters and record makers that would form the basis for lifting the ban which halted all recorded music August 1.

Padway asserted that the Radio Corporation of America made more than ten million dollars in 1941 and that its radio network, the National Broadcasting Co., earned four million dollars after taxes. He added that Columbia Broadcasting System's profits totaled nearly five million dollars after taxes, and that the Mutual Broadcasting System had a net income before taxes amounting to 67.5 per cent of the value of its broadcasting property.

He declared the Decca Record Co. had a profit of $781,000 in 1941.

British Deny U. S. Rivalry Over French

who went to Algeria from Spanish Morocco "has no support from Whitehall and in my opinion none in Washington."

The British are aware that De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, has nothing resembling the complete support of all Frenchmen. Hundreds of Frenchmen, even in London, are violently outspoken in their criticism of De Gaulle and have remained pointedly outside his organization.

The appearance of Communist Deputy Ferdinand Grenier after an escape from Paris may alienate others. Grenier has joined De Gaulle's national committee.

Giraud, it is believed here, wants to proceed directly with the expulsion of the Germans from Tunisia and Libya and is unwilling to lose time for a conference with De Gaulle on political questions with which De Gaulle's pronouncements indicate he is concerned primarily.

The delay in the campaign against the Germans is causing uneasiness in the British public mind. Since an American, Eisenhower, is supreme commander, the pause tends to hurt him indirectly.

Giraud Believed Intent on Accord

By Wes Gallagher

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Jan. 14 (AP).—Harold MacMillan, British Minister for North and West Africa, expressed the belief tonight that Gen. Henri Giraud was "determined to reach an agreement with General De Gaulle," leader of the Fighting French.

He said, moreover, that a settlement was in sight which would result in the disappearance of many objectional features in the present administration in North Africa.

Speaking of reforms which must take place in this country which is sick of the Axis, MacMillan said: "The attitude toward the Jews must be changed because the present attitude never would be acceptable to the British or American peoples. Some things introduced after 1940 must be changed."

Housecleaning

MacMillan said an agreement between De Gaulle and Girard, high commissioner for North and West Africa, must and will result in certain housecleaning and the setting up of a de facto and provisional French administration to lead the French war effort.

The Americans and British must make an effort to get in some civilian stores and alleviate civilian needs, he said.

Since his arrival, MacMillan said he "felt absolutely convinced that General Eisenhower was right originally in dealing with Admiral Darlan."

In answer to a question about persons arrested in connection with the Christmas Eve assassination of Giraud's predecessor, he said:

Had Part in Killing

"I am convinced that all those arrested now and being held either were connected with the assassination or in the events leading up to it."

He said some had been released and cleared and he understood that more would be released soon.

He lightly dismissed the aspirations of the Count of Paris, pretender to the French throne, and the Royalist group. He said he understood the count was now back in Spanish Morocco where he has a pig farm.

U. S. Acts as Coal Miners Threaten to Spread Strike

shift over from anthracite to bituminous coal for the duration of the present emergency, which has reduced coal reserves in the East, particularly in New England. Ickes said that one-half million tons of coal had been lost already, and additional production was being lost at the rate of 40,000 tons a day. Ickes also confirmed reports that he had requested shippers to concentrate production in the East temporily, suspending shipments to Canada and to points west of Erie, Pa.

Explanation Demanded

The War Labor Board's telegram called for information at today's hearing on "why the anthracite miners, citizens of the United States whose sons and brothers are at the fighting front, are on strike against the national no-strike policy and against the welfare of the Nation in time of war." It said significantly that the board will "consider the controversy on its merits when the miners have returned to work."

Approximately 2000 miners of a previous total of 19,000 who were out returned to work yesterday, an additional 10,000 voted to stay out, and the remaining 7000 took no action to change their position.

Main Reason Obscure

One question that was obscure yesterday was whether the main reason for the strike was a protest against the dues increase and thus the leadership of Lewis, or whether demands for the wage increase when present contracts expire in April loomed large.

Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri said "if the true cause of the strike should be the desire to obtain an increase in wages, it would involve an attempt to force by unauthorized strikes an amendment in the agreement between the anthracite operators and the U. M. W. prior to its expiration."

"To grant such a request would destroy not only the validity of the agreement entered into voluntarily by the U. M. W. but would create a differential between the miners of anthracite and the miners of bituminous which might result in unauthorized, but widespread strikes among miners of bituminous coal."

War Spending Due for Scrutiny

that might be used by the Republicans for campaign purposes.

Under the Vinson resolution members from the Military Committee will be allowed to sit in on Naval Committee investigations and vice versa.

In addition, Speaker Rayburn is reported to be sponsoring a plan to have members of these committees sit in on hearings before naval and military subcommittees of the Appropriations Committee.

The purpose behind the Speaker's program is to better acquaint the different committees with all the work on military and naval legislation and appropriations.

Expect "Real Work"

"We expect the Military and Naval Committees to be able to do some real work," Chairman Sabath said after conference with Speaker Rayburn. "We must do everything possible to prevent wastage of money, labor and materials, men and ships in this war."

Vice Admiral F. J. Horne, assistant chief of naval operations, testified in secret session before the Naval Committee today at the request of Chairman Vinson.

Admiral Horne reviewed the activities of the Navy since the Japanese wrecked much of the Pacific Fleet at Pearl Harbor, and told of the antisubmarine campaign against the Axis.

He told of the progress of shipbuilding, losses in battles and revealed other information, which Chairman Vinson said had to be kept secret for military purposes.

Vinson said, however, the committee's policy would be to release as much information as possible during the investigation.

Both the Military and Naval Committees will be empowered to subpoena officials and will be authorized to hire experts to conduct the inquiry.

from Henderson Field. Results were not reported.

In putting two torpedoes into one Jap destroyer, another into a second, and possibly two other "fish" into a third enemy ship, the little PT boats again proved their worth. They first won their spurs in the Philippines, sinking or damaging a number of enemy warships and supply vessels and have done effective work based at Gaudalcanal.

Nothing was said in the communique as to whether any of the American craft were damaged in the night engagement. The text of the report, No. 251, follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates are East Longitude.)

"1. During the night of January 10-11 United States motor torpedo boats attacked a number of Japanese destroyers near Guadalcanal. Two torpedo hits were scored on one of the enemy destroyers and one hit on a second destroyer. Two possible hits were reported on a third destroyer. The enemy force retired to the northwest.

"2. On January 13 a force of Marauder medium bombers (Martin B-26) with Airacobra (Bell P-39), and Lightning (Lockheed P-39), escort, bombed enemy installations at Rekata Bay. Results were not reported.

"3. United States ground forces on Guadalcanal Island supported by air forces continued their advance."

Japs Being Told Of Allied Air Superiority

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Japanese people are being told that the Americans and Australians have at least numerical air superiority in the Solomons and New Guinea, the Berlin radio disclosed today in broadcasting a Tokyo dispatch.

A correspondent of the Tokyo newspaper Asahi wrote that "the Allies have a numerically superior air force at their disposal with which they attempt to destroy Japanese bases and transports." But he added that "the Japanese air force nevertheless ever and again has scored great successes against advanced enemy strongholds and supply bases."

Nelson Confident 1943 Goals Will Be Attained

gram through with a grant of 55 per cent priority.

Nelson said Wilson was receiving full cooperation from the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission in readjusting their schedules to remove bottlenecks.

By "proper direction of traffic" in components, Nelson said, a lot more components could be produced.

In providing for this "flow," contracts would have to be shifted from one plant to another to keep plants operating at the job they can do best, Nelson said.

The directive giving rubber and aviation gasoline priorities on 20 per cent of their programs had the effect of pointing out many conflicts between programs, Nelson said. Wilson was then put to work ironing out these conflicts, he said.

The press conference marked the end of a year for Nelson as the country's production chief.

Giving the reporters a "prospectus" on the occasion, he said "the production outlook for the coming year is very good.

"Nobody is smart enough to anticipate difficulties," he added. "But we have learned a lot on what to do and what not to do."

operations over France and Holland and that one plane was missing.

Supply Ships Hit

In another operation the Air Ministry said, Hudsons of the coastal command hit two enemy supply ships in an attack on an enemy convoy off the Dutch coast.

The coastal command reported that another Nazi vessel in the convoy probably was hit by Canadian and Dutch fliers attacking in bright moonlight.

Operations today were on a lighter scale, the Air Ministry merely reporting that planes of the army cooperation command attacked locomotives and other railway targets in northern France. All returned safely.

The British reported slight enemy activity over the coastal districts of northeast England during the night and said bombs dropped in that area caused little damage and injury to only one person.

An R. A. F. commentator, asked why the Germans were making nuisance raids with a handful of planes, said they had propaganda value enabling the Nazis to claim daily assaults.

Further, he said, they also had a "detachment value" in that raids by fast fighter-bomber forced the British to send up many planes in pursuit, resulting in an appreciable wastage of machines and materiel.

Betty Hansen Takes Stand In Flynn Trial

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.—Blonde, 17-year-old Betty Hansen charged again today—this time before a Superior Court jury of nine women and three men—that screen hero Errol Flynn undressed her and was intimate with her last September 27.

Shortly after the alleged intimacy in an upstairs bedroom of the Bel Air home of Fred McEvoy, former British sportsman, she said, Flynn chatted with McEvoy in French—"and I couldn't understand what they said . . ."

Concerning whether she wanted the film favorite to remove her slacks, Betty said: "I don't have any opinions."

But she was positive about one thing: She thought Flynn was helping her to bed only because she had become ill at the dinner party downstairs a little earlier.

Cross-Examination

Flynn's attorney, Jerry Giesler, demanded on cross-examination:

"You just thought, 'this nice man is going to help me undress and lie down because I am sick at my stomach?'"

"That's right," declared Betty, former Lincoln, Neb., schoolgirl.

After almost an entire day on the witness stand, she was led, weeping, from the courtroom. She maintained her calm during her direct testimony and throughout a searching cross-examination.

On cross-examination, Betty recalled that in a Hollywood street a man named Sammy accosted her, took her to a hotel, paid a week's rent and twice gave her money for food.

Later, she said, she got a job as a waitress and took a room elsewhere.

Asked if she ever discussed with Armand Knapp, a friend who introduced her to Flynn, "that you were to play up to Flynn and drink with him?" Miss Hansen replied, "Yes."

"And even have intercourse?" Giesler asked.

"No" was the answer.

She Wanted to Fly

"You thought that by meeting Errol Flynn you might be able to get into pictures?" Giesler demanded.

"That's not true," Betty replied. She said her only ambition is to learn to fly.

Flynn is charged with three counts of statutory rape—one involving Miss Hansen and the other two involving Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16, Hollywood entertainer, who says he was twice intimate with her aboard his yacht Sirocco last August 3.

As the actor left the crowded courtroom with his attorney he was besieged by a crowd of women. One woman jostled up and kissed his hand. Another snatched the handkerchief with which he was wiping his forehead and begged:

"Please autograph it for me."

Albums, handkerchiefs and pieces of paper were thrust at Flynn for him to sign.

Oil Crisis Eased But Not Solved year to use their ration coupons at any time rather than during specified heating periods.

Announced news photographers would be eligible for C gasoline ration books for transporting bulky equipment which cannot be handled in public conveyances.

During the day, the Senate Defense Investigating Committee made public a report saying there had been "inexcusable delay" in the program for delivering oil to the East by barge.

It said ten different agencies had a hand in the program and the "lengthy and frequent" conferences between their representatives "produced many arguments but few decisions."

Steuart Spikes Rumor Of His Resigning

L. P. Steuart, local oil administrator, yesterday refuted rumors of his impending resignation as the result of recent publicity involving the withholding of fuel oil by a firm with which he is affiliated.

Steuart has a business interest in the Petrol Corp., which reportedly withheld deliveries of fuel oil from its reserves to other dealers until ordered to release some of it by the national OPA.

Steuart said he took little if any active part in the management of the concern but left that to his nephew, Curtis Steuart.

"I have done nothing to warrant my resignation," he said. "I do not even know where these rumors originated."

Lieut. Carringer Dead In Hawaii Air Crash

Connecticut Case

Birth Control Aired Before High Court

By the United Press

The Supreme Court yesterday heard spirited oral arguments over the relative moral aspects of the "rhythmic" method of birth control, which relies solely on the aid of a calendar, as against the use of standard contraceptives prescribed by physicians.

The case at issue is that of Dr. Wilder Tileston, Yale University medical professor who is challenging constitutionality of Connecticut's antibirth control law. He is appealing a State Supreme Court decision upholding the law, which prescribes jail terms for doctors who give contraceptive advice to women, including married ones whose lives may be endangered by pregnancy.

Connecticut State's Attorney Abraham S. Ullman said the statute, designed to uphold morality, does not forbid any means of preventing conception except those involving drugs, medicinal articles or instruments.

Nature's Way

He called attention to one school of thought, supported by some religious groups, which advocates the "natural" or rhythmic method based upon the cycle of fertility. The State Legislature, he said, doubtless was aware of "Nature's way" when it enacted the statute.

Morris L. Ernst, New York attorney representing Tileston, charged that the effect of the law is to discourage marriage and encourage both prostitution and "perversion within the marriage." He said the rhythmic method was inapplicable in many cases because of individual problems and that this system was not known at the time the controversial law was passed during the 70's.

Ernest noted that the Connecticut Supreme Court, in sustaining the statute, had left open an "alternative" to birth control measures, saying that "absolute abstention could be practiced."

Conduct of Human Beings

"This," he said, "would frustrate marriage, lead to perversions within the marriage and to prostitution outside the marriage."

William Beers, also arguing for the State, said the issue "involved the conduct of human beings and not merely a medical question."

"These are typical social problems in which a doctor has no vested right," he said. "Nothing is taken from him, and the statute does not affect his practice."

The Supreme Court has reversed a decision on whether it has jurisdiction and much of the argument was devoted to that point.

8 Vacancies in Old Group

It is uncertain how many new appointments will be made, however. There are now eight vacancies in the ranks of last session's committee, and with the projected smaller committee, only two of these would be filled. It is thought likely, however, that some of the men who served last session will withdraw for more important committee posts. All of the committee assignment work is being carried forward in closed sessions.

A number of new men from both parties have been turned up in the canvassing as desirable District Committee candidates.

One of the most likely so far mentioned is Representative William A. Rowan (Democrat) of Illinois. Before coming to Congress, Rowan had a lengthy career of civic service in Chicago and its environs. He served for 16 years on the city council, heading many important committees and civic projects. He was also editor of a daily community newspaper in southeast Chicago for 20 years.

Other Possibilities

Moreover, Rowan was a close personal friend of one of the District's former Engineer Commissioners, and says that he has frequently been informed of local problems and interests.

Other possibilities include Representatives Feighan of Ohio, Madden of Indiana and Philbin of Massachusetts, Democrats, and Miller of Nebraska, Norman of Washington, Arnold of Missouri and Griffiths of Ohio, Republicans.

All of these men have had years of experience with municipal problems, as mayors or city officials, and some have had first-hand acquaintance with Washington conditions.

Hoover Calls Production Main U. S. Task

(Fourth in a series of six articles by Herbert Hoover written for the Associated Press.)

By Herbert Hoover

When Russia was invaded she dropped the mental garments of Communist internationalism and took up the fighting armor of nationalism. The Russian people rose as of old to defend the soil of Russia.

She still holds fast, after loss of probably five million soldiers, 70 million of her population, with a considerable part of her industries and food sources. It is a magnificent defense by a people of unlimited courage. And now she bids fair not only to hold her segment of the ring, but even to strike telling blows. From her untapped manpower and her vast hinterlands she will still be formidable in 1943.

Stoicism of Chinese

Russia will suffer greatly on the home front. But with the spirit of nationalism reawakened, with the furious hates against an enemy on her own soil cruelly butchering her people, she will keep fighting. But she will need help in food, clothing and arms.

I have lived in China in years gone by. It is only in the last 25 years that she has developed a national spirit of independence. That spirit has been fiercely inflamed by the invasion of her soil and barbaric treatment of her people.

The living standards of the great mass of Chinese are always at bare subsistence level. Famine is the experience of every Chinese village. At present she cannot be reached with much-needed supplies of food or arms. Yet she holds half of her hinterland from the Japanese.

When we try to assess China's spirit we must remember that Asiatic peoples are less sensitive to death and more stoic in misery than the western people. The spiritual strength of their home front seems strong, but every possible help must be given to lessen her suffering.

British Empire Intact

For three years the British have made magnificent defensive war. They have lost many battles on the military front. Yet, with a nucleus of 65,000,000 white population, they have held their empire of a half a billion people intact except for Burma, Malaya and the Chinese cities.

The battle of Britain was the greatest home-front battle of history. They won by the greatest display of organization, magnificent courage and fortitude on the part of a civilian population that has ever been witnessed.

The people on the home front in Britain are the great heroes of this war. Despite air destruction they have reached the highest point in their industrial production

In a military way the British Isles are now apparently safe from invasion by land. German tanks will never see Trafalgar Square. Her industries are turning out proportionately more materials than ours.

Britain's greatest problem is the submarine. Her survival on the home front depends on convoys of materials and food from the United States. If her civil population can be protected from a degree of privation which might undermine its physical strength, they will fight endlessly. There can be no question of their determined spirit.

Favored Position

On our home front we are in a more favored position than our Allies in one great particular. The airplane has rendered the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans wider instead of narrower. No effective sea attack against the Western Hemisphere is now possible against adequate land-based planes and our Navy. We need have no fear that enemy armies will march through the United States in this war. If we hold our outlying bases we do not need to fear the destruction of systematic air attacks. While we are discommoded, we do not need fear being starved out by submarine blockade.

Our task on the home front is different from that of any other nation in the war. We must not only raise large military forces, equip them and transport them overseas but we have an enormous further burden. We must furnish finance, food and munitions to the other United Nations. We must do this in the face of the Axis submarine blockade and the Japanese conquests, which reduce our normal supplies of many commodities from overseas. And we must support our civil population in such a fashion that their physical strength and spirit are not exhausted.

Our Job Production

If we are to perform these tasks so as to get this war over without delay, we have no margins for the waste of blunders or mismanagement on our home front.

Our job is production, production and more production. And it is production of planes, ships and arms, and food right now, if the United Nations are to aggressively tighten the rings around the European and Asiatic Axis, and if we are to compel their continuing internal degeneration by effective attrition.

We could wish for better conduct and organization of our civilian front.

Our fighting forces have availed themselves of every experience and every lesson from World War I in building their organization. But these experiences and these lessons have been largely ignored and even repudiated on our civilian front.

All nations in that war, Britain, France, the United States, and even Germany—had to pioneer the way to total civilian organization. In the end, they all arrived at certain common principles of organization. Our initial and continuing mistake in this war was ignoring this experience and these principles. Only in the past few months has their validity been recognized and only yet partially adopted.

"ICE-CAPADES" PARTY IN VICTORY ROOM. When the "Ice-Capades" make their debut at Uline's Arena next Tuesday, they'll also hold a colossal after-the-show party in the Victory Room. Ralph Hawkins, Crossroads' master of dizzy rhythm, will bring his band over to play for dancing for the evening. He'll fill the place of Ina Ray Hutton, who has to rush down to Camp Bragg to play for the soldiers on a national hook-up that night . . . "Goldie," head greeter for the Victory Room when it opened, is back after a few months in Manhattan—and dispensing a deluge of cordiality.

It's not true—that rumor that Xavier Cugat's orchestra will play for only one night when the new Statler Hotel opens its Embassy Room. The management says they expect the Cugat band to remain for three weeks.

TROIKA PERSPECTIVE. Gomez and Beatrice, dancers of lacquered grace, joined the Troika revue last night. An exciting parade of stars is coming up shortly in this elegant bistro. Tito Coral, the notable South American singer, will arrive on January 28, also the dancing Callahan Sisters. Gloria Gilbert, the ballerina, said to wear ball bearings in her dancing slippers, should arrive on February 4 . . . Terri La Franconi, Troika emcee, will sing at the Pan American Union on Sunday night.

A TUG-OF-WAR has just been won by Washington's Paul Young over Benny Davis, who's opening a new night spot in New York. It was over the booking of Buddy Lester, the up and coming younger brother of Jerry Lester of the movies and radio. Upshot of this friendly but earnest shindig is that Buddy will open at Paul Young's next Wednesday. And Benny is looking for another headliner for his show.

MILES HALLETT, whose "velvet" dance music is the star attraction at Cafe Caprice

BLINDFOLD ACCURACY. Organist Leonard Friendly of the Neptune Room is playing "Canadian Capers" blindfolded these eves, never misses a note. This is real organ athletics when you consider that the "C. Capers" involves more fast fingering and footwork than any other number short of the "Hungarian Rhapsody."

Bob Lawrenson, smart young singing drummer, will join the Milton Davis Orchestra in the Rainbow Room this afternoon. He's said to be no end nifty with a romantic song.

LOVELY LISTENING. "Daybreak," as played by Paul Kain's orchestra at Treasure Island, with Maestro Kain being extra cute with the clarinet. Also the rumba rhythm of Treasure Island's other band, Ovando's Pan-Americans. It sets the whole place a-quiver. . . . The "Victory Medley" being played every evening in the Metronome Room by Alan Holmes' orchestra. It's always different, always thrilling . . . Lyda Allen's artful contraltoing of "For Me and My Gal" at the Lotus . . . The sheer exoticism of "Babalu" when it's sung at restaurant "400" by Felicia Flores. . . The masterful baritoning of Massenet's "Elegy" by Slipooskin, star of the Balalaika. . . . The gypsy music moods of the Anchor Room's Matt Windsor. Especially if he's also in the mood to play the accordion instead of the piano. . . . The marvelous trimming up that only Little Jack Little, now at El Patio, can given to "Dardanella." . . . The wistful touch that the Casino Royal's Eileen George of the Helen Morgan voice gives to "He's My Guy."

SWEETHEART OF THE O. T. C. is Earline King of the Dubonnet Room. She was officially named "Sweetheart of Class 12" of the officers' training camp at Fort Washington after she recently sang there. Class 12 also visited the Dubonnet Room practically en masse.

MIDGET BABY GRAND. The Hi Hat's maestro, Jack Neal, is buying the tiniest baby grand piano ever made. It looks like a toy but isn't, has a three and a half octave range. Jack plans to play it with his left hand while his right hand attends to his regular piano.

The Rocco Terrone unit at Mayfair has just been signed up on a new three months' contract that will insure their popular presence in town until the end of April.

SULTRY SPECIALS. People are calling up to say that the new Carlos Molina orchestra at Del Rio is hotter'n a ton of tamales and simply reeks with rhythm . . . Maestro Jose Morand of the Carlton's Cosmos Room has made a new Decca record, "African Lament," to be released very soon. He'll also play the number in the Cosmos Room.

Pat Rooney, king of the tap dancers of two generations ago, is still the king, it does seem. He's been at the Gay 90's for many weeks and the customers seem to want him to stay forever.

KAVAKOS IS A-BOOMING! Last Saturday night more than 300 people were in line at 9:30 p. m. waiting to get into Kavakos Grill. This by way of a hint to get there early this weekend. There's a smashing floor show presided over by Bernie Lit who acts like Harpo Marx when he sees girls, has 'em all squealing. In the line-up are Singer Joan Harvey, Acro-dancer Jane Mason and Chickie and Bonnie in a bright musical comedy act and skits.

Refusing Data In Depot Case Jails Unionist

By the Associated Press

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 14.—A labor union official was sentenced to jail today for refusing to give his organization's records to a Federal grand jury and attorneys said appeal of the sentence would provide the first direct United States Appellate Court test of such a union's right to immunity.

Judge Albert W. Johnson held Jasper White of Philadelphia in contempt and sentenced him to 30 days imprisonment for withholding documents in his possession as assistent business agent of local 542, A. F. L. International Union of Operating Engineers.

A jury investigating fraud charges in building of the 40-million-dollar naval supply base at nearby Mechanicsburg, cited White yesterday in a presentment charging his "conduct and attitude" in refusing union records was such as to hinder and prevent the investigation. The presentment did not say how the records fit into the picture.

The jury recessed for possibly a month coincident with signing of bench warrants for arrest of nine civilians already indicted in the investigation. Trials are not expected until outcome of the inquiry. Charges named in the indictments include conspiracy to defraud the Government, bribery, theft and extortion.

White, who was released in $1000 bail pending appeal to the Third U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, claimed that turning over his books might incriminate himself and the union. This raised the question of whether an unincorporated union is entitled to same immunity as an individual under the Constitution.

Judge Johnson declared the union "a legal entity owing duties to the Government and the Nation, among them to assist in proper investigation and prosecution of any acts against laws of the Nation."

FBI Arrests 12 Chinese On Draft Count

The Justice Department announced yesterday the arrest of 12 Chinese in connection with an alleged conspiracy to evade the draft.

Eleven of those taken into custody by the Federal Bureau of Investigation are to be arraigned in Washington, while the other, Wong Sam, will be arraigned at Richmond, Va., on charges of bribery and attempt to evade military service.

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, named Wong Lee, 42, as the leader in the alleged conspiracy asserting that he had accompanied many Chinese to induction centers and "made himself obnoxious by injecting himself into the examination as an interpreter, stating that the Chinese registrant was unable to speak or understand English."

Hoover said that Lee was a native of Stockton, Calif., and had operated laundries in Everett and Melrose, Mass., before coming to Washington a few years ago.

The other Chinese seized were James Chan Wing, Lung On Lee, Kenneth Hung Lee, Gin Shue Ngee, Yee You King, Lee Gee, Kenneth Wah Lee, Victor NG Kai, Duck Shang Louie and Lee Ben Hong. The indictment alleges Wong Lee conspired with them to keep them out of the draft.

Hoover asserted that investigation indicated that Wong Lee had received approximately $20,000 from Chinese who had escaped military service through his help.

The FBI chief said that out of about 90 Chinese who reported for induction at nearby Fort Myer, Va., approximately 70 were rejected on grounds of illiteracy, and that others were rejected for "simulated physical disability."

Hoover asserted that investigation showed that the Chinese had transferred their draft registration from New York and Boston in order to utilize Lee's services.

Death of Two Held Murder And Suicide

A verdict of homicide in the fatal shooting of Mrs. Nora Mae McCollum, 32, mother of two young children, and suicide in the death of her estranged husband, Charles Ramsey McCollum, was given yesterday by Dr. W. C. Welburn, Arlington County coroner.

The verdicts were based on the police investigation, which indicated that McCollum had lain in wait behind a hedge for his wife to emerge from her home at 213 North Cleveland Street, Arlington, and had shot her in the head with a .22-caliber revolver, which he immediately turned on himself. The bodies were found lying about 4 feet apart by a neighbor, Donald Newton, 121 North Cleveland Street, who notified police. The shootings occurred at 7:10 a. m.

The McCollums had two children, Dolly Mae, 14, and her brother, Raymond, 10, who resided with their mother. Both attend Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, in Arlington.

It was understood last night that an uncle of the children was caring for them.

Mrs. McCollum, according to police, was employed in the Pentagon Building and her husband was said to be a bricklayer.

The bodies were removed to the C. J. Ives funeral chapel and were sent last night to Danville, Va., for burial.

Robbed Cabman Gets Fast Action In 11th Precinct

Roy Hart, 39, Negro cab driver, has a pretty high opinion of Eleventh Precinct police—a patrolman walked in with the perpetrator of a robbery he was reporting.

Shortly after midnight, Hart was held up by an armed Negro at Forty-fourth and Grant Streets Northeast and robbed of $2.75.

When his assailant fled, Hart drove to the Eleventh Precinct. He was reporting to Desk Sergt. James Gosnell when Patrolman C. B. Ruffin came in with a prisoner. "That's the man right there," Hart shouted. Ruffin explained he had collared the man for investigation as a suspicious character.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR
She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Judicial Vacancy

Paul B. Cromelin, president of the District Bar Association, has written to Attorney General Biddle asking that a Washington attorney be appointed to succeed Justice Wiley B. Rutledge who has been nominated for the Supreme Court. His suggestion is well taken. Congress requires the District to pay 30 per cent of the expenses of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Presumably that is based upon the assumption that about 30 per cent of the cases handled by the court are local in origin. Yet the court has not a single member who can be called a representative of the local community.

The appointment of outstanding jurists from other parts of the country to serve on the Court of Appeals here is not, of course, unnatural. That tribunal is called upon to decide many important cases involving governmental interests. But it certainly ought to have at least one judge who is thoroughly familiar with District law and procedures from actual practice in the local courts. In fairness to Washington as an integral part of this great democracy, moreover, outstanding candidates for judicial appointments in this city ought to be recognized no less than those of other localities. Mr. Cromelin has appointed a committee consisting of seven past presidents of the Bar Association to suggest not fewer than three distinguished Washington lawyers well qualified to fill Justice Rutledge's shoes. Self-pushing candidates will thus be shunted aside in favor of eminent representatives of the legal profession. Such a list will certainly merit the sympathetic consideration of the President and the Attorney General.

There are rumors that Thurman Arnold is slated for this post as a means of ending his trust-busting activities in wartime. The probable desire of the Administration to silence Mr. Arnold in his present position would be a very poor reason for elevating him to the District bench. The position clearly ought to go to a man selected for his legal learning and judicial temperament, and in the circumstances the best candidates will be found right here in the District bar.

Smoother Flow Of Oil

One fact has been evident throughout the furor over fuel oil shortages: officials responsible for the flow of fuel oil have tried earnestly to distribute the supplies available as evenly as possible among consumers. The results obtained have not always been satisfactory. But that is to be expected in any case where experimentation is necessary to work out satisfactory controls. The important fact is that both the OPA and the Petroleum Administration for War are gradually eliminating defects in the system which permitted some suppliers to withhold oil while citizens shivered in unheated homes.

Last week the OPA took a long step forward by the issuance of a nondiscrimination order compelling suppliers and dealers to sell fuel oil to anyone holding the necessary rationing coupons, without regard for prior commitments. The effect was to release oil to many citizens whose tanks had previously been dry. It seemed to us at the time that the order did not go far enough—that it might open the way for discrimination of a different sort. But the OPA has reserve powers by which any attempt on the part of dealers or consumers to grab more than their share of oil can be checked. Apparently it intends to use those powers whenever necessary. Meanwhile, moreover, the PAW has further strengthened the antidiscrimination order by limiting to a 10-day supply the amount of fuel oil or gasoline that dealers and industrial consumers may have on hand. The effect should be to minimize the hoarding of fuel oil and further to insure an even flow of that precious commodity to consumers.

Now the PAW is working on a system of priorities that will give first call upon the scarce stocks of fuel oil to homes and war plants. In a very real sense of the phrase, fuel oil has become "affected with a public interest." Every gallon of it must be directed into channels where it will render essential service. Prior commitments and commercial practices cannot be allowed to stand in the way of even distribution of the limited supply among those who are dependent upon it for health and a minimum of comfort.

Fortunately, the situation has been temporarily eased by an increase in the supply of fuel oil reaching the Atlantic Seaboard. Faster turn-around service and more rapid repairs for tank cars seem to be largely responsible. It would be foolish to assume, however, that even the peak of our difficulties has passed. Cold weather may greatly increase the consumption of fuel. Whatever problems arise, the regulating agencies are under obligation to see that available oil is distributed as equitably as possible. The fact that they continue to adjust their regulations in the public interest will strengthen confidence in the rationing system. It does not yet appear that Washington has been allotted a fair share of the fuel that is reaching this area. But the steps already taken to relieve a critical situation lend support to the hope that this wrinkle, too, will soon be ironed out.

Last Straw

The impending arrival in North Africa of Marcel Peyrouton, former Minister of the Interior in the Vichy government, and more recently Vichy's Ambassador to Argentina, is a development which Americans can only view with profound alarm. North Africa today is in a highly explosive state. In no small measure the hopeless mismanagement by civilian American officials on the spot, notably the American Minister, Robert D. Murphy, is responsible for it. The elevation of Peyrouton to a high place in the administrative apparatus of that liberated region has all the dangerous potentialities of a lighted match in a powder barrel.

It is not at all clear who was responsible for summoning Peyrouton to North Africa or why he was summoned. It is true that he has had considerable experience in that region, having, over a period of years, held various positions of power in French West Africa, Morocco, Algeria and Tunis. But his record in those posts does not bear too close examination. Despite his break with Vichy at the time of Pierre Laval's return, Peyrouton represents all that was bad in the Vichy regime. What our men on the spot should be aiming at is the elimination as rapidly as possible of Vichy influence rather than its extension.

When American and British troops landed on the coast of Morocco and Algeria last November, high praise was heaped on Robert Murphy for the presumably able and effective political preparations he had made. There are reasons to regard these encomiums as a good deal less than fully deserved. Be that as it may, there are certainly no reasons to praise Mr. Murphy for what he has done since. On the contrary, it is high time he was removed from a post where his lack of understanding of the realities, his readiness to appease the time-serving and double-dealing Vichy bureaucrats, and his general incompetence make him a very dangerous man to have in a highly difficult spot.

The Peyrouton appointment, which hardly could have been made by General Giraud without Mr. Murphy's approval, is the last straw. Certainly in view of the fact that General Eisenhower has his hands full with military problems and must, perforce, depend for his political advice on the civilian officials on the spot, the least this Government can do for him is to provide him with political coadjutors who are competent. The time is long overdue, as we have said before, when a man with a name and a reputation should be sent to North Africa with an efficient staff.

Raids On The Ruhr

It would be foolish to deny that disappointment exists both in Britain and this country over the failure of the R. A. F. and of this country's growing air force in the European theater to carry out night after night such devastating raids as that which wiped out a large part of Cologne last year. Actually, while the past year saw other 1000-plane raids on German cities, the number of these raids was not great, and the aerial offensive against the Reich is still in the future.

Nonetheless the fact remains that Allied air power has had a very damaging effect on Germany. Undoubtedly one reason for the decline in the Luftwaffe has been the reduced production brought about by the pounding which German factories, railroads and canals have received. To be sure, the damage is nothing like the damage which the German submarines are inflicting upon our production on its way to the fighting fronts. Still the war of attrition on Germany is going on. In the nine days between January 3-12 of this year six large-scale raids on the Ruhr have been carried out by the R. A. F. The cumulative effect of such raids is bound to be significant.

Hitler's Problem

The conferences which Adolf Hitler has held recently with Rumania's puppet dictator, Marshal Ion Antonescu, and with the Hungarian and Bulgarian war ministers, as well as those now planned with the Croat puppet regime in Yugoslavia and the secretary-general of the Spanish Falange, all tend to underline the fact that Germany is beginning to run out of manpower.

Over a period of many months the Third Reich has been putting pressure on its satellites to send additional levies to the Eastern Front. All of them responded in greater or lesser measure, having little alternative but to do so. But all of them are now loath to send more men. Rumania has suffered such heavy losses that Antonescu is now under pressure from his people to clear what are left of the Rumanian forces out of Russia. Hungary has been hoarding her military formations so as to have them on hand when the situation begins to look favorable for a final reckoning with Rumania over Transylvania. Pro-Axis as it is, the Bulgarian government realizes that the Bulgars are so pro-Russian that a national uprising would be courted if Bulgaria entered the war against the Soviet Union. And in view of the tragic experiences of the Spanish "Blue Legion" of volunteers which fought for Hitler on the Eastern Front and in view, also, of the turn in the military tide, it is doubtful whether General Franco is prepared to provide Hitler with more cannon fodder.

Thus Hitler's growing needs of manpower coincides with the increasing reluctance by his satellites to provide men. No wonder, then, that General Ditmar, official Nazi commentator on military affairs, took pains the other day to warn the German people over the radio that because of what has been happening in Russia, the German home front will have to be subjected to new restrictions so that more men, now in industry and agriculture, can be sent to war. "Germany will in the future," General Ditmar said, "make more sparing use of manpower to consolidate the new Europe. This will give the fighting fronts the numerical strength which so far has alone been lacking to achieve decisive victory, even against the tremendous numerical superiority of the Soviets. This will involve considerable restrictions in the daily life at home in Germany, but the German people will know that everything which is done is done to relieve those who bear the heaviest burden." This will hardly cause the Germans to get up and cheer.

Little Fellow

The Tolan Committee has brought out the postwar cost as well as the present waste of the idleness to which many small business concerns have been reduced. "Every manufacturing plant which might be used on war work and every community in which such plants are being shut down is a serious loss to America's postwar program," say the legislators. The emphasis is well placed. In our preoccupation with war, we have thought only of the loss to warmaking represented by the idle machines and idle men in the small business world. This is serious enough. As the President, in his budget message, said, only by the maximum use of our resources and men can we attain the new spending goals. There must also be considered the danger to our postwar social and economic health involved in the concentration of war orders on the big business concerns.

This situation reverses the trend toward the decentralization of industry which marked the later prewar years. Before the war, decentralization—some called it diffusion—of industry had made rapid progress. It was facilitated by the growth of transport, the spread of electric power, and the development of substitutes. The movement had made such progress that Henry Ford looked to the time when he could grow his car, except for the engine, on the farms, and dismantle his great plant at River Rouge. He was already doing wonders in the use of soya beans in manufacturing his car frame, for example. All this decentralization was hailed everywhere as a boon to the social economy of America because it meant a stimulus to rural life. The incidence of war, however, is undoing it. Civilian lines are being discontinued and war orders are going to big business. If we come out of the war with a greater concentration of industry than ever, the country as a whole will be the loser in terms of balance and social health. As Senator Murray of Montana has said, "We can never effectively fortify democracy in America if what is left of this waning small-town life in our country is completely destroyed, as it surely will be if we fail to act now."

How to put the little fellow to work on war orders and so preserve the healthy tendency of the prewar decade is a problem of extreme complexity. Engineering skill is lacking in the small plants for the execution of most war orders. Business methods likewise are too uncertain to permit reliance upon those plants in the fulfillment of orders which must be integrated to a national scheduling program. But, as we have suggested before, there is a way out of the dilemma. Give to small business orders for stock items and replacement parts, of which the armed services stand in need, along with the tools for current warmaking, and this would give the little fellow a stake in war business, help him ride through the emergency, and keep him in condition to regain his place in our economy when war gives place to peace. If he were also given some engineering help, that would doubtless activize him into service as a useful partner in the war effort.

WINGED VICTORY

When now I spread my wings to split
A cloud across the sea,
Fleet as the dart of pointed steel
That lifts and carries me,
Am I not more of magic flight
Than crow and honey-bee?

By poise of heart and grip of hand
I mount the dizzy height,
A blackbird on the noon of sun,
A fire-fly in the night—
God gave the swallow wings; to man
Only the wish for flight!

So we that hear the hum of bees
And watch the blackbird fly,
Like worms that shed their robes of silk
To flutter far and high,
Have shaken loose of dreams and won
To freedom in the sky!

Have Been Offensive

ON JANUARY 6, the Office of Price Administration issued an announcement that "All pleasure driving" (in 17 Eastern States and the District of Columbia) "will be outlawed as of noon tomorrow." To enforce this order, OPA set up in some cities a system of local policemen and OPA inspectors, working in pairs. The policeman has authority to stop a motorist. The OPA inspector has authority to take up the motorist's gas ration card. Unless the motorist can show he is driving on a business or otherwise essential trip, his card is taken from him, subject to appeal later. The original OPA announcement said: "The burden of proof as to the essential nature of the trip will rest wholly on the motorist."

This practice has led to widespread criticism not merely from motorists but from persons concerned with the fundamental problem of reconciling individual liberty to Government control in wartime.

What is it we have here? First, a motorist has an A card, entitling him to 3 gallons of gas. This limitation on quantity of gas has been in effect several months. It falls on all alike and has not been seriously questioned. It is a limitation justified by the conditions, enforced by a practicable method universal in application.

NOW, however, OPA goes much farther. It now inquires, through an official inspector, just what use each motorist makes of his 3 gallons. If, on a given trip, he is using his gas for what the OPA inspector regards as pleasure, the inspector takes up the motorist's card.

The inspector asserts power to pass judgment whether a given trip is pleasure or not pleasure, justified or not justified. In answer to specific questions, OPA has officially declared that driving to a store to buy a suit and hat is not justified, that driving to a club meeting is not justified, that driving "to my father's grave" is not justified "except when actual religious ceremonies are conducted." On the other hand, driving "to look for a new home" is justified, driving 70 miles "to close up my country house" is justified, driving "my sick dog to a hospital" is justified, "if no other means of transportation is available."

Here we have a compulsion that does not fall on all alike. For it depends on the discretion of individual OPA inspectors, exercising judgment on an infinite variety of cases, shadings of cases, and minutely varied circumstances. By this system, OPA is undertaking to inquire into and supervise the actions of millions of citizens. If there were not serious fundamental objections to it, we should still be obliged to ask, Is it practicable? Any way it is looked upon, it reflects an attitude of mind on the part of OPA.

On a previous occasion, in June of last year, an enforcement method practiced by OPA ran into strong public disapproval. That was when filling station operators had been ordered to sell no gasoline except upon production of a card by the motorist. On the Sunday following the order, in Philadelphia, as told by the Inquirer, "Volunteer OPA agents, most of them attractive young women, toured the service stations. In each station they told the attendant they wished to buy 3 gallons of gas, but had left their ration card at home." In New York, the Herald Tribune, describing a hearing of a guilty station operator, said that the investigator, "a pert blonde, testified that she had driven into the filling station, said she had forgotten her ration card, and asked for and obtained 2 gallons of gas." In the publicity arising from the incident, an OPA official said, in defense, that the young women investigators had been specifically instructed to use no persuasion—merely to drive into the filling station and say, "May I have 3 gallons of gas—I don't have my ration card with me."

IN THE COMMOTION following that episode last June, the most pertinent comment came from the Baltimore Sun, which emphasized the American tradition that a man should help out a lady in difficulty: "The conclusion is unescapable that whoever designed this offensive method of law enforcement was strangely ignorant of American folkways."

In all this, the essential facts are: We are at war—and no sacrifice by citizens can be too much. For prosecuting the war, we need gas, all that can possibly be supplied—the more gas our armed forces have, the sooner the war will end. But OPA regulations ought to conform to American folkways—including the Bill of Rights.

The War Budget

By Paul Schubert

For Teamwork And Tools

IN BATTLES on many far-flung fields, a "pattern" of modern American warmaking begins to appear. When we batter the Japanese out of their positions at Buna, when we swap blows with the Germans in North Africa, we reveal the first experimental forms of what will in time ripen into a characteristically American kind of fighting.

SCHUBERT

It is inevitable that we do battle in our own way, just as we play football in our own way—just as we tackle the problems of transport, of farming, of manufacturing in our own way.

As to what our fighting will be like when it is fully matured, it won't be surprising if it proves to be pretty effective.

American life is dominated by the physical facts of the soil on which we live. That is a truism—it applies to all nations.

IN THE CASE of America, and especially of the United States, the soil on which we live is a vast continent with an infinite variety of terrain, with many climates, many advantages, many geographical barriers, many adverse factors.

The dominant fact of our life here in this country is perhaps this: From the beginning, all our problems have been too big for one man to solve alone, with his two bare hands and his unaided body.

To overcome this difficulty, we have developed in two ways.

1. While clinging to an ideal of individualism, we have developed "teamwork" into a national characteristic that permeates every phase of our national life—sport, community life, merchandising, manufacture, even education and religion and of course military organization.

2. We have developed the idea of using tools—"labor saving devices" to aid or supplement or replace human effort—to a greater degree than any other nation.

Under the conditions in which we live, it has seemed axiomatic that every man should have a motorcar, rather than depend upon his own underpinning or upon a slow-moving animal. Every house should have a fully automatic heating installation, and mechanical refrigeration, and tools for vacuum cleaning, and a telephone and an electrically operated pump and dozens of other machines and gadgets. Every farm should have tractors and haymaking machines, planters and reapers, buzzsaws and whatever else it takes to farm vast acreage with little manpower.

Teamwork and tools—that's our formula. That it works, for us, is demonstrated by our achievement in setting up a practical civilization of high cultural standards on this virgin terrain—and doing it in a remarkably short time.

It is inevitable that we should apply the teamwork-and-tools formula to the problem of making war. For us it seems wasteful and impracticable to use men for jobs that can be done by machines—a theory all the more natural when the jobs involve the risk of life. If the Japanese are well dug in at a place like Buna, we feel we must be ingenious enough to bring up enough strength in guns, tanks, aircraft and other forms of concentrated power, to annihilate the enemy without annihilating our own attacking soldiers too.

For us it seems axiomatic that when we start using effective teamwork-and-tools military power in the field, we will begin winning battles one-sidedly—and soon after that the other side will either get discouraged and quit, or be battered to submission.

The fantastic sum of money, the war budget, whose spending in the 1944 fiscal year the President this week asked Congress to approve, is a yardstick of our faith in teamwork-and-tools military power.

When we propose to "spend" 100 billion dollars in one year of 365 days, we are not trying to "buy our way out of the war."

On the contrary, this sum is a challenge—a goal placed before our productive effort. These figures are not indicative of "money," as such. This particular hundred billion dollars doesn't even exist. These figures are a measure of what we believe will be the greatest productive effort of which we are capable in the fiscal year 1944—bearing in mind the fact that we don't want to burn ourselves out in one year, but must be prepared to go on producing in a long, sustained effort, an effort that will not stop when the "war is over."

No. That's the odd thing. It won't stop.

This year of 100-billion-dollar war production will be a milestone in our history. It will inaugurate another chapter in our life upon this continent.

HAVING LEARNED how to produce tools and manufactures and food and raw stuffs at this rate, we will never go all the way back to the old level.

Having applied the teamwork-and-tools formula to the stupendous problems of overcoming world distances to apply the military power needed to win this war we shall end up by discovering so many new applications for the formula right here on our own continent, that to the "postwar generation" the "prewar days" will seem as "corny" as the pre-1914 days now seem to us.

This budget is the outward sign of an America that flexes its muscles and goes confidently forward, not only to the job of generating enough military power to win the war—forward to the future too.

Smoking In Bed

A fire in a District rooming house on December 31 caused the death of two young men. Since the occurrence of this disaster, District officials have been issuing statements regarding delinquency of rooming house proprietors.

It may be that some buildings used as rooming houses are overcrowded and not properly equipped with fire escapes. But the chief culprit in causing property damage of $20,000 and the loss of two lives in the fire at 1365 Euclid Street Northwest has not been denounced by any representative of the District government. I refer to the careless smoker. On January 1, Fire Marshal Calvin G. Lauber was quoted as confirming "police reports that a lighted cigarette ignited a fire on a day bed in a first-floor hallway, which quickly spread to all parts of the house."

There is no way of estimating the number of smokers, driven by habit to smoke in bed, who endanger their own lives and those of defenseless neighbors in the same building. Yes, rooming houses should be inspected with a view to saving lives in case of fire, but there should also be inaugurated an educational campaign revealing the cigarette as an agent of death when smoked in bed.

Democratic Attitude

Congratulations on your editorial of January 9 on Buchmanites, particularly the part about conscientious objectors. It is almost the only and certainly the most accurate and unprejudiced statement of the facts on conscientious objection to war in the United States today that this reader has yet seen in any major newspaper.

So long as such important publications as The Washington Post continue to report fairly the facts on minority groups and to go to bat for civil rights, as you do in your editorial of the same date, "Freedom No. 2," there is hope even for pacifists that democracy may survive this war.

Emergency Powers

The OPA rationing order to ban all pleasure driving is the last straw, the pleasure driving edict and the way in which it is being enforced sets up a Gestapo right here in my U. S. A. and I don't like it.

We are continually having drives for this and that. Let us Americans who wish to remain free men demand a drive, Nation-wide in scope, for strict, to the letter adherence to the Bill of Rights and the entire Constitution of the United States on the part of the new Congress. Now let me squelch right here those all too many "But this is war" singers. War and emergency do not alter the Constitution one iota, or our rights of freedom. I shall quote the Supreme Court decision and Charles Evans Hughes, a truly great Justice, in the matter:

Will an emergency create new powers in State or Federal Government? "Emergency does not create power. Emergency does not increase granted power to remove or diminish the restrictions imposed upon power granted or reserved. The Constitution was adopted in a period of grave emergency. Its grants of power to the Federal Government and its limitations of the power of the States were determined in the light of emergency and they are not altered by emergency." NED WATERS.

Unjustified Complaint

It did my heart good to read the letter signed "Satisfied Customer," but it seems very unfitting that it should stand practically alone among so many letters of complaint and criticism.

No matter how high the taxes, how little gas, coffee, sugar and so forth—this is still the most desirable country in which to live. Leaving out patriotism and looking at it from an impartial viewpoint, how many of the other countries still have so many of the good things in life?

I beg you come tonight and dine;*
A welcome awaits you and some wine—
(That is an error, it is clear;
The best that I can do is beer);
A brew, perhaps, of lesser brand—
No Persian pomp, you understand;
A soup fish, two meats and then
A salad fit for aldermen—
(An uncle died, my Uncle Bill—
The soup was left me in his will;
The fish I do not have to ration,
Those two meats are imagination.)
A dish of grapes whose clusters won
Their bronze in Carolinian sun;
(I'm glad that they were never canned—
In fruit cocktails they would be banned).

Next cheese—for you the Neufchatel,
If Mr. Wickard thinks it well;
A bit of Cheshire, possibly—
If I can get priority;
Cafe au lait or coffee black
(If you find grounds just give 'em back);
One lump of sugar and no more,
That is, if it won't lose the war,
With Kirsch or Kummel or Cognac—
(My wine house has an inside track);
Cigars and pipes I'll have for you
(Unless by then they're rationed, too).
And then I'll tightly bolt the door.

Our Own Questions and Answers For Puzzled Eastern Autoists

Q. I was driving my mother-in-law downtown and a cop held me up and said it constituted pleasure driving. What do you say?

A. We didn't think even a cop could make a ruling as crazy as that.

Q. I recently drove my car to see a movie starring the Ritz Brothers. Did I use my auto for amusement purposes?

A. People will differ on that.

Q. My Aunt Minnie phoned me to hurry over to take her for an auto trip as the monotony of staying indoors was killing her. I did so. Is this okay?

A. Yes. This comes within the ruling that you may use a car in cases of sickness or disaster.

Q. The OPA says it is all right to drive a dog to a dog doctor. I know a man who rents a sick dog over every weekend. What about this?

A. There's a chiseler born every minute, and one to give him new suggestions.

Q. The rules say a car may be used in cases of a threat to life or property. A friend of mine has a neighbor phone him every Sunday that his cottage at the beach has been broken into. How about this?

A. Some fellows will try anything once.

Q. I see where it is ruled okay to drive a car to business meetings. I have figured out a dodge. My wife says she has got to have $10 extra. I tell her I will take it up with her while we take a drive to the country. Do the arguments pro and con constitute a business session?

A. You think of everything, don't you.

Q. My car was outside a bingo party. An officer said I was there for pleasure. I said it was business. Who was correct?

A. It depends on how you made out at the game.

Q. My car was found near a night club and an official ruled that I was in a place of amusement. Please advise.

A. We have observed night club entertainment these days and if it constitutes amusement we give up.

Q. It has also been ruled that driving a car to a wedding does not constitute business or amusement. What do you say?

A. It all depends on the wedding.

Bus Wasted Gas

With such a serious gasoline shortage I wonder how a prominent passenger bus company can justify wasting gas even in one case.

Flynn Nomination

By Ernest K. Lindley

Why It Was Made

IT IS only too easy to join in the hue and cry against the nomination of Ed Flynn as Minister to Australia and the President's personal Ambassador. Any nomination which creates a political ruckus in which no vital question of policy is at stake must be regarded as a political mistake. But a brief review of the record will reveal why Flynn was nominated and why he wants the job.

LINDLEY

Flynn is not a ward-heel politician or run-of-the-mine city machine boss. He is a graduate of Fordham University Law School, intelligent, well-read, and well-mannered. He inherited money and made more by methods of accepted respectability in politics: through his law practice.

As a quite young man, he became Democratic leader of the Bronx, one of the five counties and boroughs of New York City. In a way he was a protege of Charles F. Murphy, then leader of Tammany Hall—as were Al Smith, Robert F. Wagner and several other offspring of Tammany Hall who became respected public servants. Flynn has been the Democratic leader of the Bronx ever since—through the rise of Tammany to its peak of power and corruption during the Walker administration and its disintegration, as a result of the several investigations which paved the way for its loss of the mayoralty in 1933.

THROUGHOUT those years, Flynn kept his Democratic organization in the Bronx relatively clean. One of his standing policies was to elect a strong district attorney. This in itself tended to keep the organization in the Bronx within bounds. The investigation—notably the Seabury investigation—which wrecked Tammany and damaged the Democratic organization in other boroughs of the city never found much wrong in Flynn's organization. And they found nothing with which to tar him personally.

When Franklin D. Roosevelt became Governor of New York in 1929, he and the late Louis McHenry Howe picked Flynn as the Democratic leader in New York City to tie up with. He was able, shrewd, and clean. Flynn became Roosevelt's Secretary of State. In 1931 and 1932, when the break came between Roosevelt and Tammany, Flynn stood behind Roosevelt. He was the only Democratic county leader in New York City to support Roosevelt for the Presidential nomination. Tammany, and its allies, both in the city and up State, stood with the conservative coalition which opposed Roosevelt's nomination. Flynn risked his political future to back Roosevelt. At the Chicago convention he was with Jim Farley day and night, working behind the scenes.

DURING the Walker Administration, Flynn's representative in the New York City government had been Joseph V. McKee, president of the Board of Aldermen, whose opposition to Tammany on many issues and general air of righteousness won him the nickname, "Holy Joe." In 1933, Flynn finally made his bid for supremacy in the city by running "Holy Joe" for mayor on an independent recovery ticket. McKee was narrowly beaten by Fiorello LaGuardia in a three-way race in which the Tammany candidate ran last.

With such a record, and having come through all the investigations of New York City politics and politicians with a clean slate, Flynn must have felt a deep personal humiliation when it developed that paving blocks owned by the city had been used to pave a court on his country farm or estate. The grand jury which investigated the case brought no indictments. It looked like a case in which somebody was trying to do something nice for "the boss." It is unbelievable that Flynn knew the circumstances, for the incident is wholly at odds with his record over many years. Moreover, getting the blocks free of charge could have meant nothing to Flynn, who is well-to-do.

In national politics, Flynn has stuck to Roosevelt through thick and thin while others, like Jim Farley, with less reason to feel affronted or neglected, have drawn away. Any time during the 10 years he probably could have had jobs of higher rank than Minister to Australia. But Flynn is not ambitious. He did not want the national chairmanship in 1940. It is a safe statement that he wants a diplomatic appointment now chiefly as an honor and, in a sense, a vindication.

Flynn, moreover, is better qualified by intelligence, education, and shrewdness than are most nominees to ambassadorships and ministerships. And he is one of the tightest-mouthed men in American politics. If he is not too seriously handicapped by the furor over his nomination, he probably will do a good job in Australia.

Liberal Arts And Willkie

Why This Idolization?

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., Jan. 14.—Decrying the idolization of individual men both in the Allied and Axis countries, Wendell L. Willkie, in a speech prepared for delivery at Duke University tonight, pleaded for the preservation of liberal education in America.

"Everywhere you turn today," the 1940 Republican Presidential nominee declared, "you find people clinging to certain men who have been exalted in the public mind out of all proportion to their talents, however great.

"In Russia, there is Josef Stalin, in China Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, in Britain, Winston Churchill, in the United States, Franklin Roosevelt. The stature of these men is in every case out of the ordinary and they deserve the high positions they have won. And yet, dare we say that any one of them is indispensable? The moment we say that, our world must change."

Willkie said he perceived a connection between the emphasis on single individuals and the neglect of liberal arts. Had Americans more faith in liberal education, he said, they would have more faith in the "great leavening process of democracy which forever pushes new men to the top."

At the outset Willkie attacked the arguments of those who have disparged the liberal arts, saying:

"We cannot win a true victory unless there exists in this country a large body of liberally educated citizens. . . . If we are going to risk our lives for freedom, we must . . . do all we can to preserve the deep springs from which it flows."

He defined freedom as being of the mind. It is in the liberal arts," he added, "that you acquire the ability to make a truly free and individual choice.

"Burn your books—or, what amounts to the same thing, neglect them—and you will lose freedom as surely as if you were to invite Hitler and his henchmen to rule over you," he said.

Infants' Milk Supply Ample, Officials Say

By Ovid A. Martin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Agriculture Department food distribution officials said yesterday there was no reason for anxious parents to become concerned over supplies of evaporated milk for their babies.

Infants, they said, will be assured of ample supplies even if acute shortages should develop.

These officials, who asked that they not be quoted, said it is quite likely that consumer rationing of evaporated milk and butter will be ordered by Secretary Wickard as soon as the Office of Price Administration gets rationing of meats and canned and dried fruits and vegetables started.

Infant Supply Assured

The rationing would be designed to assure infants and other essential users of ample supplies and to conserve, during the season of heavy production, supplies which should be held over for next winter.

A voluntary stop-gap rationing program went into effect in Cleveland yesterday, with physicians, welfare stations and visiting nurses issuing cards to mothers needing evaporated milk for their infants.

Present prospects point to a civilian supply of about 45 million cases of evaporated milk in 1943. This compares with about 54 million consumed in 1942.

Big Reserve Stocks

The Agriculture Department holds a reserve of 15 million cases which, officials said, could and would be used to relieve acute civilian shortages. The department recently released two million cases for this purpose.

Supplies are expected to begin increasing within a few weeks. The season is near at hand when milk cows freshen and the production of milk increases sharply.

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 2

The Victory Tax

The Victory tax is a temporary income tax, additional to the regular income tax, imposed by the Revenue Act of 1942. It is payable upon income for the year 1943; consequently taxpayers will find no reference to it in the income tax returns for the year 1942 which are now being sent out by collectors of internal revenue. However, payments on account of Victory tax will be made currently, by deductions, or "withholding" from wage payments made after December 31, 1942. The amounts of the payments are required to be deducted by the employer, and remitted quarterly to the collector of internal revenue. When the taxpayer makes his income and Victory tax return for the year 1943 (due in 1944) he will show in his return the amount that has been withheld by his employer and claim credit for this amount in his return.

The amount withheld by the employer is five per cent of each wage payment in excess of the "withholding deduction." The "withholding deduction" is an exemption from tax on the first $624 of "Victory tax net income" for the year, or the proportionate amount corresponding to the payroll period. Thus, for an employe paid weekly, the amount withheld on account of Victory tax is 5 per cent of the amount of the wage payment in excess of $12. A table of approximate amounts may be used by employers for computing this deduction. For example, the table provides that on weekly wage payments over $12 and not over $16, the amount withheld is 10 cents, and on weekly wage payments over $16 and not over $20 the amount withheld is 30 cents. Corresponding amounts are withheld for wage payments of other amounts and for other payroll periods.

The amount withheld is computed upon the total remuneration of the employe for the period (in excess of the withholding deduction), including remuneration in form other than cash. Thus, if board and lodging are part of the employes remuneration, the cash value of the board and lodging must be included in computing the amount to be withheld.

Employers are required to furnish employes a statement of Victory tax withheld. These statements are not furnished with each wage payment but are made for the calendar year or for the period of employment during the calendar year. If an employe is employed until the end of the year, the statement must be furnished by January 31, 1944; if the employment ceases during the year, then the statement must be furnished within 30 days from the time of the last payment of wages.

As the statements will be in evidence in substantiation of an employe's claim for credit for Victory tax withheld, they should be carefully preserved by the recipient.

Born in Charlotte, Mich., Flaherty enlisted in the Naval Reserve, class V-7, in July, 1940. After receiving his commission, he was ordered to active duty aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma.

The new destroyer escort will be launched at the Consolidated Steel Corp. shipyards.

Greenbelt Disease Rate Low in December

Dr. William Eisner, head of the Greenbelt (Md.) Department of Public Health, reported yesterday that only five cases of communicable disease were reported for the entire town in December.

Three children are being treated for chicken pox and two for whooping cough, he said, and of 324 school children examined since the beginning of the fall term, 68 were found to have enlarged tonsils.

Dr. Eisner urged that all Greenbelters be revaccinated against smallpox if their last vaccination is more than seven years old, but parents were assured that no real danger of an epidemic exists at present.

The town conducts a free health clinic on Tuesday between 9 and 10 a. m. at the health department offices, 2-A Gardenway.

All the above members of the Baseball Writers of America are in the Army. This is the Navy list:

Les Biederman (Pittsburgh Press), Jack Hernon (Pittsburgh Tri-State News), James M. Kahn (New York Sun), Fred W. Landucci (Pittsburgh Press), Marvin W. McCarthy (Chicago Times), Jack Miley (N. Y.), Gerry Moore (Boston Globe), Jimmy Powers (New York News), Steve Snider (Chicago U. P.), Francis Stan (Washington Star), Joe Trimble (New York News).

As for the B. B. writers now in the Marines:

Robert Broeg (St. Louis Star "What Again?" Times), Bill Goodrich (Brooklyn Eagle), Hy Hurwitz (Boston Globe), Maurice Moran (Pittsburgh A. P.), and Burt Benjamin (N. E. A.), is in the Coast Guard.

Foreign correspondents who are members of the writers' association are Bob Brumby (I. N. S.), Pat Robinson (I. N. S.), Cy Peterman (Philadelphia Inquirer), Drew Middleton (New York Times), and Quent Reynolds (Colliers).

We've probably overlooked a few outstanding ball players, but a couple of fair batting orders could be culled from the ones listed. Picture the dismay of a pitcher facing a line-up of this sort:

Rizzuto, shortsop (most difficult man to pitch to); Lewis, third base (great bunter and hit-and-run specialist); DiMag, center field ('nuf sed); Williams, left field ('nuf sed); Greenberg, first base ('nuf sed); Slaughter, right field (ask the Yankees); Pytlak, catcher (tough little man); McCoy, second base (he must have been good, if Connie Mack said so), and Ruffing, pitcher (good enough to pinch hit for the Yankees).

We think that the following line-up could just about win a wartime pennant, too:

The first one is, conservatively, a million-dollar ball club. The second team (it's a laugh to call them seconds) is pretty close to that figure. Either would draw a million customers at home, and, given the chance—which probably few of them want at this time—could make a million bucks for any charity the Government designated.

Well, I can dream, can't I?

Indianapolis Takes Early Lead to Win

Washington Veteran Plays in 'Superman' Style Before 1800; Brown Clinches Fray

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Even the all-out efforts of Superman Lou Trudel last night could not save the Washington Lions from a 4-to-3 defeat by the Indianapolis Capitols in an American Hockey League game at Uline Arena.

Before 1800 fans, the veteran Lou did everything but hold a pep rally to rescue the Lions from the 2-to-0 deficit as he overcame an ironclad defense to make all three Washington goals.

The Caps' power first made itself felt early in the opening stanza when Defenseman Sany Ross got past Goalie Paul Gauthier at 2:15. Then in the second frame Hec Kilrea turned the trick on assists from former Lion Winger Leo Richard and Joe Fisher.

Gauthier Near Score

Thus on the short end of a 2-0 score the Lions turned on the pressure as Gaston Gauthier, without a single teammate to run interference, came within a whisker of a goal that was saved by a narrow margin off Goalie Floyd Perras' leg.

It remained for Trudel alone to solve the mystery of the Indianapolis defense. At 17:53 of the mid semester, he caught in midair a shot from Stablemate Jimmy Jamieson's stick and shoved the puck by Perras before he even realized it was on its way.

Two minutes later the Caps' Les Douglas scored again, but Lou came back strong in the final period for his second marker.

Goalie Gauthier was drawn half way to the Washington blue line as Indianapolis Winger Adam Brown sent the disc lofting gently into the wide open net, boosting the score to 4 to 2. But the indefatigable Trudel bounced back again for this third goal at 19:30, and in another tremendous effort a second later almost managed to deadlock the game. Perras, however, caught the puck on his stick as the final buzzer sounded.

Pro Football Sets All-Time Crowd Record

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Teams of the National Football League played before a greater attendance in 1942 than in any previous year since the professional sport was organized.

Elmer Layden, commissioner of professional football, announced today that spectators totaled 1,725,764 despite the uncertainties of war and the most wretched weather conditions in ten years. Fourteen charity games drew 453,652 fans and preseason exhibitions were played before 156,958 more. The remaining 1,115,154 attended the regularly scheduled contests of the championship season—a total that was 6 per cent less than the record number attracted to the same number of games the previous season.

However, 16 of the 1942 games, 30 per cent of the regular schedule, were played in severe, adverse weather. The weather was so bad on one occasion that a game had to be postponed.

Commissioner Layden said that a better break from the elements in any five or six of these games would have sent the 1942 attendance above the all-time high of 1,188,616, for the regular schedule, established in 1941.

The largest crowd to see a National League team in action—101,103 witnessed the Chicago Bears' 21 to 0 victory over the college all-stars at Chicago. The smallest crowd—3858 braved the cold to see the Brooklyn Dodgers and Philadelphia in Brooklyn November 15.

Green Bay's annual visit to Chicago to engage the Bears topped attendance for the regularly scheduled contests, drawing 42,787 to Wrigley Field on November 15.

Pieces of Haight:

Pounds Labeled White Cargo By Waitress With an Idea

Marietta Park, D. C.
January 14.

Dear Boss,

That letter titled, "Pounds Runs Into Difficulties on Washington's Food Front" brought repercussions. Boss. Several restaurants have invited me to their places to try food and service. I received two invitations for home-cooked meals and I also got several notes from waitresses. There's no doubting the power of the press, Boss, despite the fact that these gals didn't send their phone numbers.

HAIGHT

However, one waitress who signed herself, "It Wasn't Me," came through with a new one. For reasons beyond by control I have picked up a number of nicknames. I've been variously referred to as Fatso, Pounds, Lardy, Heavy and many others, including that darned "Mr. Five By Five."

Well, this gal really let me have it. She started her note this way: "Dear White Cargo—" Boss, that is just about the championship, but that wasn't the only reason I was interested in her communication. She has brains and comes through with an idea which at first thought isn't half bad, considering it looks as if I won't be able to get a half gallon of gas away from Washington this winter.

She suggests that I make a day-by-day tour of all Washington eating places. If I like the food then I let the restaurant display a sign on the door. "Approved by Haight." She ended up by writing: "You should think this over. Look at the the publicity George Washington got from 'George Washington Slept Here.' Maybe they will have a movie some time, 'Pounds Haight Ate Here.' I'm not charging you anything for the tip, but the next time you come around to our place try to leave one."

Now Boss, don't let that line give you any ideas. I don't want any assignment like that. Please forget it. Just think of all the hardships it would inlolve. When I was ready to go to work, instead of going down to our cozy office, I would have to start off for one of those places with an afternoon floor show. I'd have to take a half dozen old fashions to get my eyes open and then dig into the steaks, chops or chicken.

When I finished I would have to go a few doors down the street and start at old fashions again. No Boss, I don't want any job like that. Wouldn't be long before somebody would be referring to me as Pounds Haight, prominent in Washington cafe society. Then again, instead of getting in "The 400" I probably would end up "A 400"—if you know what I mean.

And think of all the trouble I'd have filling out those expense accounts.

Now, listen, Boss. I have taken all the assignments that nobody else wanted like going to California, Florida, etc., missing all the sleigh riding and ice skating. I've done these things by calling on my fortitude, sticking my chin forward and giving myself that old "up and at 'em, Post" pep talk.

No, this eating job is out if for no other reason than I don't see how I would have time to get home for dinner and besides I would have to carry my lunch box. As ever, POUNDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—I certainly felt sorry today for Buttercup, our pet chicken. She was perched on top of our furnace cackling and shaking her head. I couldn't get her to understand that we had run out of fuel oil. (This letter proves we haven't run out of corn.)

Okla. Aggies, Kansas May Quit as Foes

By the Associated Press

Lawrence, Kans., Jan. 14.—Phog Allen, Kansas basketball coach, said tonight he had written Coach Henry Iba of Oklahoma A. & M. raising the question of,, "The advisability of continuing basketball competition between our schools after this war."

Allen's letter followed last night's heated contest between the two rivals in which four Aggie players and one member of the Kansas team were banished for excessive fouling. In the last minute of the game Iba had only four players on the court despite the presence of a substitute on the Aggie bench, and the Kansas quintet chose to handle the ball instead of shooting.

"I have written Iba in a friendly manner," the Jayhawk coach explained, "expressing concern over the roughness of our last two games at Lawrence. I have a high personal regard for Henry as a coach and gentleman. Under the circumstances, however, I felt it necessary to raise the question of continuing relations."

Commenting on the use of four men in the game, won by Kansas, 36 to 29, Allen declared he had agreed with Iba to use the free substitution rule, and that the Aggies could have used a full team.

Argyle Slashes Golf Dues in Half During Gas Ban

In an effort to maintain its present membership during the no-driving-for-pleasure ban, Argyle Country Club has reduced the dues for the first quarter of 1943 by 50 per cent, it was announced last night by Ray Lawrenson, chairman of the golf committee and a member of the board of governors.

The board met at the home of Dr. A.C. Norcross, president of the club, and decided to reduce the dues through April 1. Argyle is only a half-mile from the Four Corners bus route on the Colesville Pike.

Manager Notified by Boss Rickey

Leo's Successor In Doubt; Physical Exam to Be Taken At St. Louis Home

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—The Army beckoned another baseball headliner today with a draft board notice to Leo (The Lip) Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, to report for a physical examination.

The call was announced by Branch Rickey, president of the Dodgers, at his weekly press conference.

Durocher, who will be 38 years old next July 23, at present is undergoing a checkup at Mayo Clinic, which he has visited annually for several years.

Rickey reached him there by telephone to inform him of the notice from the Brooklyn Draft Board, No. 133, where several of the Dodgers registered, and Durocher said he would take the examination when he returned to his home in St. Louis.

Rickey Surprised

The notification apparently took Rickey by surprise and he told newspapermen he had no plans about a manager.

"I don't know what I am going to do, in fact I don't intend to do anything right now," he declared. "I reserve the right to change my mind, of course, but I haven't thought about this thing yet."

Durocher is married and in Class 3-A, but his wife designs dresses and is not a dependent.

Durocher has been in the big leagues 16 years as an infielder and for the last four seasons has managed the Dodgers, winning the National League pennant in 1941. He reached the World Series previously in 1928 with the New York Yankees and in 1934 with the St. Louis Cardinals. He was retained as manager of the Dodgers for 1943 in negotiations with Rickey in November.

Durocher's notice followed less than 24 hours after the Dodgers' star centerfielder, Pete Reiser, had been inducted into the Army at St. Louis and also came on the heels of an announcement by Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees that he intended to enlist.

Rickey said that the manpower problem was becoming acute for the Dodgers and that the club might go into spring training with fewer players than any other club except the Philadelphia Phils—which, he added, was "not a very desirable comparison."

Originally Rickey had hoped to announce to his press conference the Dodgers' training base, but had to postpone this disclosure till tomorrow afternoon after twice interrupting the session for private telephone conversations.

Camilli Falters

Laytonville, Calif., Jan. 14 (INS). Dolph Camilli, California rancher and star first baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers, apparently is wavering on his decision to retire from baseball for the duration.

Asked tonight if he would accept Brooklyn's managerial berth if Leo (The Lip) Durocher were called into the armed forces, Camilli replied:

"I'm not thinking about changing my mind. I have plenty of things to keep me busy on my ranch right through the baseball season. But you never can tell about things like that."

Camilli recently announced his retirement because of transportation difficulties and because of the manpower shortage on his Laytonville ranch.

After rolling up a 9-0 edge in the first quarter and boosting that to 18-3 at halftime the Johnnies were never threatened. Chuck Dudley's 7 points was high for the game.

Despite the fact that few locals have ever seen Wilson fight, the odds ranged about 2 to 1 in his favor on his record alone.

Griff's Son Says Charlotte Team Will Be Unmoved

By the Associated Press

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 14.—Calvin Griffith, former Charlotte manager, who is here on a visit, quoted Clark C. Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, today as saying he did not intend to move the Charlotte franchise in the Piedmont League.

The elder Griffith was quoted as saying the franchise would remain here if it stayed in the league.

The Piedmont directors will meet in Washington January 24 to consider disposition of franchises of the Detroit Tigers in Winston-Salem and the Boston Red Sox in Greensboro.

The Asheville franchise already has been transferred to Lynchburg, Va.

Maryland Golf Bodies to Meet Here Tonight

The Middle Atlantic and Maryland State Golf Associations will hold their annual winter meetings consecutively tonight at the Ambassador Hotel, the former at 5:30 o'clock and the latter at 8:30. The purpose of holding them on the same night and the same place was to save travel as generally the same club officials attend both.

Both associations are expected to plan future meetings on any tournament ideas as under the present gasoline restrictions competitive golf is almost an impossibility. Officers will be installed and other routine business will be discussed.

Tunney Praises Hoyas' War Training Program

Former Champion Says Obstacle Course Finest He Has Seen

Lieut. Comdr. Gene Tunney cast a solid vote of approval for Georgetown University's war physical training program after an hour and 15 minute visit to the Hilltop yesterday, where the head of the Navy's physical education program reviewed students in the V-1, V-5 and V-7 programs.

Commander Tunney's visit included a trip to the obstacle course, constructed under the supervision of Joe Gardner, graduat manager of athletics, and he former heavyweight champion called it "the finest I've ever seen, including Great Lakes."

Addresses Students

Tunney's visit to Georgetown was his first to any university to review a physical training program. He opened the program by meeting the faculty in the recreation parlor and then addressed a group of 300 students in Copley Hall. Tunney was introduced by the Rev. Lawrence G. Gorman, S. J., new president of Georgetown University, who met the student body informally for the first time.

The importance of being physically fit and clean living habits, which includes abstinence from drinking, smoking, etc., was the theme of Tunney's talk.

He viewed a boxing class of 70 under the direction of Jim McNamara and extolled the importance of boxing in any physical program. Tunney then watched a class of 60 go over the obstacle course and through a class in calisthenics.

Tunney was impressed with the entire program, which he learned more of from the Rev. John J. Kehoe, S. J., faculty moderator of athletics, and Gardner.

Georgetown's physical training course, introduced in September by Gardner, has been made an accredited course at the university.

Maryland U. Seeks Conference Lead

Terps Play Generals at Lexington

Considered second division timber at the start of the season, Maryland University's surprising courtmen will have an opportunity to take the Southern Conference lead when they open a two-night invasion of Lexington, Va., by meeting Washington and Lee tonight.

The Old Liners and George Washington are currently tied for the top spot with two victories each. Maryland will have its hands full in the Generals, however, a team with seven lettermen from last year.

Coached By Proctor

To date Washington and Lee, coached for the first time by Gummy Proctor, the veteran conference official, has beaten Roanoke and lost to William and Mary and Virginia by a point each Last year Cookie Cunningham's Generals beat Maryland twice.

In other games tonight Wilson Teachers College will meet the Quantica Marines at Quantico. The Leathernecks will probably present their star-studded aggregation for the last time as four of the starting players leave tomorrow. They may not be available tonight.

Gallaudet leaves on a two-day road trip for Mason-Dixon Conference games with Bridgewater tonight and Randolph Macon tomorrow.

With a break from the timer's table Maryland might have taken a four-game winning streak to Lexington. Two Philadelphia papers yesterday championed Maryland's cause in a 51-to-49 defeat at the hands of Penn Wednesday night.

Basket Tangled

Penn was leading by 2 points with 50 seconds to play and the basket which put them ahead tangled the cords in the Maryland basket. After the teams went down the court someone observed the twisted cords and the referee and Maryland's Bob James walked down the court and tossed the ball through the hoop. By the time they walked back 30 seconds had passed and the clock remained running, costing Maryland a half minute which they needed to shoot at Penn's 2-point lead.

Penn has won five straight games, losing only to Aberdeen Proving Grounds, a Georgetown victim.

Maryland will run into another club with a better-than-expected record to date in V. M. I. The Keydets beat William and Mary and V. P. I. and lost to Duke by two points on the champions' court. Coach Burt Shipley will take an added starter on the Lexington trip, Hubert Werber, the halfback who has been out only five days but has shown enough to make the traveling squad.

Feller's Dad Laid to Rest

By the Associated Press

Van Meter, Iowa, Jan. 14.—William Andrew Feller, 56, was laid to rest today after memorial services in the school auditorium.

Six hundred friends came to pay last respects to the Iowa farmer who gave much of his lifetime to training his son Robert to be a major league baseball pitcher.

And when he had succeded and the searchlight's glare shone on him, Will Feller still wore the same size hat.

The last months of the elder Feller's long illness were touched with an even deeper pride, his neighbors said. For his son was wearing the blue of the U. S. Navy with the rank of chief specialist in gunnery.

Smith's 153-352 Tops Clarendon Bowling

The Commercial "C" Duckpin League at Clarendon Bowling Center was topped last night by Smith, Hall Furniture, who posted individual highs of 153-352 to lead his quintet to team highs of a record game of 614 and high set of 1648, the quintet also winning a pair from V. F. W. to take over third place. Even though Baumbach Plumbers whitewashed the C. & P. boys the latter retained first place by a one-game margin.

Tech, Central Fives Feature School Card

Winners and losers in the opening program of the interhigh basketball series will be paired off this weekend in a pair of interesting double-headers at Tech gym, the first tonight at 7:30.

Tech and Central, who started their 1943 contention with victories last week, tonight oppose Anacostia and Wilson, respectively. Tomorrow night at the same time Coolidge and Eastern's once-victorious five take on Roosevelt and Western. The games feature a 2-day schedule of 12 local battles.

The Central-Wilson affair should attract most of the attention tonight. It brings together a defending champion Wilson club that was thoroughly battered in its opener against Eastern. The Tigers, however, are conceded a better team than that licking indicates. They will be facing a big and rough Viking quintet which goes in for plenty of shooting without a great deal of interest in the fine points of the game. Its 39-26 triumph over Anacostia demonstrated that.

By all the rules Tech should have no trouble whatever with Anacostia. Last week it nosed out a tough Roosevelt club in overtime, at the same time that the Indians were taking their plastering from Central. Fans will be picking the hosts by as many as 20 points.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE
Anacostia at Tech, 7:30.
Wilson-Central at Tech, 8:45.
St. John's at Greenbelt, 8.
Friends at Boys Latin, 4.
W.-L. at Fairfax, 4.
Bethesda at Landon, 3:30.
Rockville at Georgetown Prep, 4.

TOMORROW'S SCHEDULE
Roosevelt-Coolidge at Tech, 7:30.
Western-Eastern at Tech, 8:45.
Gonzaga at C. U. Frosh, 7.
Tech at Navy Plebes, 4.
Bullis-G. W. Frosh at Eastern, 7.

Western Tops Blair, 51-29, With Spurt

Starting a big push in the second half, Western's Red Raiders overcome a 22-all intermission deadlock and waded through all Montgomery Blair defense to close the game with a 51-29 decision yesterday at the Western Gym.

Ray Love, Red forward, led the scoring with 20 points and Teammate Lou Beatty tied Blair's John "Boo" Clarke with 10 points each.

Western held the boys from Silver Spring to a lone basket in the final period and only five points in the third quarter, three of which were foul shots. Blair's fourth loss was Western's second victory in three games.

The Gallup Poll

Slight Majority Disapproves New York Plan To Lower Voting Age to 18, Survey Shows

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 14.—The fact that men as young as 18 are now being inducted into the Army has raised the question of lowering the legal age for voting.

If a man is old enough to fight at 18, it is contended, he is old enough to vote. In New York State a constitutional amendment to lower the voting age is scheduled for introduction into the Legislature. The idea has likewise received attention from Congressmen and Senators in Washington, particularly Senator Vandenberg.

The American public's first reaction to the idea, pending further discussion of it, is one of conservatism. A survey by the Institute shows that although nearly two out of every five voters questioned throughout the country favor a lower voting age, a slight majority are skeptical about the wisdom of such a policy.

Field reporters for the Institute sounded out public reaction on the following question:

"At the present time American citizens cannot vote until they become 21 years of age. Would you favor changing the law to allow men and women 18, 19 and 20 years old to vote?"

The results are:

Yes	39%
No	52
Undecided	9

From a purely political point of view, a lowering of the voting age would likely help the Democrats. Public opinion surveys have repeatedly found that the younger age groups are predominately Democratic in their voting sentiments.

Opposition to lowering the voting age centers around the feeling that young men between 18 and 21 are not sufficiently well informed about political issues to cast ballots at the polls.

As a Michigan florist put it, "Physical prowess does not insure either mental stability or maturity," or a Baltimore clerk, "They just haven't got enough sound political judgment at that age."

Against such arguments, however, must be weighed the minority opinion, perhaps best expressed by a college dean in Boston, Mass., who said, "The boy of 18 today is a good deal more mature than boys of that age were 20 years ago."

The most frequent argument of those in favor of lowering the voting age is, however, "If they're old enough to fight, they're old enough to vote."

There is virtually no difference of opinion when the answers in the survey are broken down into age groups, as the following tabulation reveals:

Age Groups	Yes.	No.	Undec.
21-29	41%	53%	6%
30-49	38	52	10
50 and over	37	52	11

5 Sentenced In Plot to Aid Jap Conquests

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—Leonard Robert Jordan, 42, leader of the Ethiopian Pacific Movement which the Government said advocated a Japanese-controlled Africa, was sentenced today to 10 years imprisonment and fined 10,000 for sedition.

Four other leaders of the movement were sentenced to terms of from four to eight years.

They were James Henry Thornhill, 42, eight years; Lester Eugene Holness, 39, seven years; Joseph Hartrey, 36, an Army private arrested at Fort Dix, N. J., six years, and the Rev. Ralph Green Best, 62, four years. All except Hartrey are Negroes.

One Pleaded Guilty

The Government said the defendants, all charged with sedition and conspiracy to commit it, used their movement to advise Negroes to refuse to fight for the United States and to impede enlistments. Hartrey pleaded guilty before trial. The others were convicted December 30.

A witness testified that Jordan shouted at one meeting that "after Japan wins I will have President Roosevelt picking cotton and I will ride around in a rickshaw pulled by Stimson and Knox."

Federal Judge Clarence B. Galston, intimating that Jordan may have received some compensation from Japanese agents, said he was imposing a fine because it was evident that the paltry sums realized by collections at weekly meetings were insufficient to support Jordan.

Seven Others Arrested

Diversion—the Hard Way

Luray, Va., Jan. 14.—Several students of Luray High School walked 5 miles from their homes to school for a basketball game and the 5 miles back. When one of the youngsters entered home his mother asked him how he enjoyed it? "I liked it fine, mom," he said, "but I got a little dizzy walking back."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Resignations Readied By Top OPA Officials

Most of the top Office of Price Administration officials have their resignations written which they'll present to Prentiss Brown when he's confirmed by the Senate for OPA chieftain. But very few of the resignations, if any, are expected to be accepted. A wholesale walkout of key officials was threatened when Leon Henderson quit. Most of the officials have been offered better jobs than they now hold in industry and in other Federal agencies. However, they have been urged to stick it out and those who weaken are called "coward" by their colleagues. Brown will make some changes. His Senate secretary will be his executive assistant. And if Brown allows price ceilings to be punctured too often it's a good bet that several officials will insist on resigning.

Farm Credit Governor Al Black is under consideration for a key job in Agriculture's Food Production Unit. Former Gov. Clif Townsend of Indiana is certain to land one of the top jobs. . . . The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices will look into the cases of Seventh Day Adventists who are told they must work Saturdays or else resign. . . . St. Elizabeths Hospital is in urgent need of male attendants. The salary is $1320 a year plus overtime. Apply at 801 E Street Northwest. . . . Agriculture Secretary Wickard has personally put into effect a share-your-meat program. When his daughter recently married a friend sent him two suckling pigs as a gift. One pig was eaten and the Secretary brought the other one down to the office and shared it with his assistants. For being a Good Samaritan now the Secretary is accused of hoarding meat.

Government girls and boys who would like to work Sundays, weekends, or all their vacations on farms in nearby Virginia and Maryland will be given a course in farming by the American Women's Voluntary Service. Classes will start February 3 and they'll continue each Wednesday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 for six weeks. The boys and girls will be taught how to pick apples, harvest wheat, corn and other crops as well as plow and hoe. Last year 763 Federal workers participated in the farm program. The number is expected to be much greater this year. The committee will accept applications at 2170 Florida Avenue. Phone Dupont 1478 for further information.

A rider to Navy's Appropriation Bill discriminates unfairly against higher-bracket employes. It limits the number of employes who can be paid $5000 or more. No other department or agency is hampered by a similar rider and why the Congress insists on tying this anchor around Navy's neck is something that no one can explain or defend. The rider has been on Navy's bill for the last two years and it applies to money appropriated since 1941. Under the recent overtime pay act employes in several sections are now making a few cents more than the section chiefs. The chiefs have higher ratings but they actually get less money. There isn't much incentive to be a boss when that condition exists. The Navy situation is another reason why a joint congressional and executive committee should be created to study the over-all Federal pay problems. Navy now has no protection from "pirating" Federal agencies.

The next series of War Department paydays—January 18, 19, and 20—will cover base pay plus overtime from January 1 to 15, minus victory tax, war bond and retirement deduction. No bond or victory tax deductions were made against the paychecks distributed on January 4, 5 and 6. However, the employes were paid overtime for the full month of December. The checks, however, weren't as large as employes anticipated for the reason that from three to six days' pay was withheld and it'll be held back until the employe resigns. War promises that all employes will now be paid on time. About 10 per cent of the paychecks were withheld under the old system.

Justice plans to pay its employes overtime on January 29. Many had expected it this week . . . Civil Service Commission will make every effort to get its employes paid overtime on the twenty-third . . . Hugh Cox stands a good chance to take over both the War and Anti-trust Divisions at Justice if Thurman Arnold is appointed to the United States Court of Appeals. He's now in London for BEW . . . Secretary Ickes recently wrote a letter bawling out the owner of an auto he observed parked in Rock Creek Park with the motor running. Capitol employes will demand that they be given a 20 per cent raise in place of 10 per cent when the overtime act expires on April 30.

Bill Visions Civil Service Appeal Board

Dismissed Worker Given Privilege Of Protest Under Mead Measure

A bill to establish a Board of Appeals in the Civil Service Commission, to which any employe who is dismissed from the classified service could appeal his case, was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York.

The board would supplant present irregular appeal procedure which is now carried on within the departments and agencies themselves. No similar centralized review board exists at present.

Under the procedure outlined in Mead's bill, a dismissed employe would be entitled to make written application to the board for a hearing and review of his department's removal action. The review is specifically described as "a matter of right."

5-Member Appeal

The employe would be able to submit evidence, appear before the board with or without a representative, and "hear, examine and reply to" information submitted by other parties.

The appeal panel would consist of five members, at least one of which would be a labor representative, and the chairman would be picked by the Civil Service Commission. The bill did not make clear how the board was to be appointed, but it would apparently be named by the commission.

The legislation is understood to have the approval of Federal employes' organizations.

Officials of the Civil Service Commission explained that present intradepartmental appeal systems were set up by an executive order of 1938, directing the agencies to set up conciliation councils within their own organizations to handle such complaints.

Hasn't Worked Well

They declared, however, that many agencies never appointed such groups, and that the system in general has not worked well. It was pointed out that the commission's own committee, with jurisdiction over 6000 workers, has handled an average of only five complaints a year.

Spokesmen said the bill would standardize appeal procedures, which now vary widely throughout the Government, and would assure workers in all agencies the same type of treatment.

There is at present a Board of Appeals within the Civil Service Commission, but for different purposes, and officials warned that the two should not be confused. The current board handles only appeals from the actions of the commissioners, reviews such complaints as dissatisfaction with examination ratings or other rulings.

1000 Cases of Liquor Seized Here for Nonpayment of Tax

GET THE GOODS—Agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue examine liquor seized yesterday at the El Patio Club in the biggest liquor tax evasion haul under the new tax regulation effective November 1. Allegedly there was $30,000 worth of undeclared liquor stored in the basement of the night club

A stock of more than 1000 cases of distilled spirits valued at about $30,000, was seized by agents of the Alcohol Tax Unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau from the basement of El Patio, a night club at 711 Thirteenth Street Northwest, yesterday.

The owners of the night club, John Longo and Larry Kelly, denied ownership of the liquor which was found in the basement and seized for nonpayment of the "floor stock" tax of $2 a gallon which became effective November 1, stating that the basement floor is not rented by them.

Investigators and inspectors of the Tax Unit stated that it had been definitely established that no tax had been paid on the 1000 cases and said they were recommending that the United States attorney prosecute the owners of the liquor.

Conviction on charges of violating the internal revenue law can bring a maximum fine of $5000 or three years' imprisonment or both.

Investigators reported the seizure as the largest of its kind in this section since the law went into effect and stated that it came as a result of a month and a half of investigation through wholesalers' records of sales.

"It is a result of a concentrated drive to bring in all new taxes on legal whisky assessed as a floor tax due November 1," a spokesman said.

Donald L. Tydings of 301-5 Munsey Building, Baltimore, Md., was the investigator in charge.

State Orders New Service By W. & O. D.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14.—The Washington & Old Dominion Railroad was ordered to inaugurate on an experimental basis, provided equipment can be obtained, at least one round trip passenger service daily between Rosslyn and Leesburg in an order entered today by the State Corporation Commission.

The order is another chapter in the much-discussed case of passenger service on the northern Virginia line, but still leaves in doubt whether such service can be restored because of the difficulties of obtaining suitable equipment.

The commission, which conducted another hearing on the case yesterday, ordered the railroad to continue to make "diligent efforts" to obtain the equipment and to report at least every 30 days the results of such efforts. If the equipment is found, the railroad was ordered to install the passenger service immediately and make reports on financial returns from its use by the traveling public.

The commission also requested the Office of Defense Transportation to assist the W. & O. D. in locating equipment. The order said that the railroad appeared to have made diligent efforts to buy the equipment, but so far had been unable to do so. Testimony concerning these efforts was offered at the hearing yesterday by G. C. Baggett, vice president and general manager of the railroad, and C. O. Bailey, superintendent of motive power on the line.

G. A. Kretzschmar, Codeveloper of Linotype, Dies

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 14.—Gustave A. Kretzschmar, whose work with Ottmar Mergenthaler on the linotype revolutionized printing in general and newspapers in particular, is dead.

Yet he lived and died so quietly that his death—which occurred on Tuesday—escaped immediate attention even from the men whose lives were most affected by Kretzschmar's work.

Kretzschmar, whose funeral will be held tomorrow, was 81.

Until three years ago, when he suffered recurring heart attacks which made work impossible, his work was all-absorbing. Associates said that to Kretzschmar the linotype never was a finished product and much of his time was devoted to developing improvements.

Bible Group Elects Dr. Darby; Gives Testaments to Servicemen

By Robert Tate Allan

Post Church Editor

More than 17,000 Testaments and Bible portions, including several thousand to service men, were distributed by the Washington City Bible Society during 1942, it was reported at the annual meeting yesterday at the Washington Federation of Churches Building, 1751 N Street Northwest. It is the local auxiliary of the American Bible Society.

DR. DARBY

Reelection for the third year of Dr. W. L. Darby as society president was another feature of the session, when it was officially reported that the society's scheduled one-year drive for 10,000 Testaments for service men had gone over the top in only three months. The executive committee voted to continue the efforts to secure more Testaments for the service men.

Page Mc. Etchison, religious work secretary of the Central "Y" and president of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, and George B. Fraser, president of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention of Churches, were reelected vice presidents; Howard Rees, local Baptist Student Secretary, secretary, and A. N. Schroeder, Superintendent of Concordia Evangelical Lutheran Church's Sunday School, treasurer.

Added to the executive committee were Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; George E. Harris, executive vice president of the Organized Bible Class Association; E. H. DeGroot, president of Central Union Mission's board of directors and prominent layman of National Baptist Memorial Church, and Earl Citron, well-known Bible class worker of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Victory Sidelights

Columbus U. Plans to Aid War Victims

Five new scholarships for the study of law by men and women disabled in the war have been established by the board of trustees of Columbus University.

James J. Hayden, dean of the school of law, who made the announcement, said that the scholarships will be effective September 1 and will be made upon basis of selection by the school. Dean Hayden said:

"The rehabilitation of disabled veterans of World War II is one of the greatest reconstruction problems incident to this great conflict. Large numbers of men and women who planned careers in the legal profession have answered the call of service to their country and those who have been disabled should be given every opportunity to prepare themselves for their chosen profession."

Revolutionary Cannon Headed for Scrap Pile

A few, if not all, of the cannon of Revolutionary War vintage, which have decorated the grounds of the State Department, will be tossed into the smelting furnaces, if plans now being considered by the War Department are carried through.

It could not be learned when the old relics would be sacrificed in the name of modern war needs but, it was understood, officials of the Federal Works Agency have been conferring with the War Department concerning their disposal.

Chevy Chase Red Cross Chooses Officers

Officers elected for 1943 were announced by Chevy Chase Branch, American Red Cross, yesterday. They are Mrs. Edgar Fowler, chairman; Mrs. Daniel Walser, vice chairman; Mrs. Joseph P. Brantley, treasurer, and Muriel B. Adams, secretary.

Annual reports of the branch revealed that 16,448 garments and 1400 knitted articles were completed by the production unit, which contributed knitted goods to personnel of the U. S. S. Livermore and the U. S. Naval Hospital in Bethesda.

40 Radio Station Workers Vaccinated

Press Tours D. C. Housing Projects

34,491 Public Units, Costing $85,000,000 Seen in Survey Conducted by FHA

A gigantic building program in the Washington Metropolitan area, comprising 35,491 housing units costing approximately 85 million dollars was shown to the press yesterday by the Federal Public Housing Authority.

Included in the tour that newspaper representatives took were temporary dormitories for girls, demountable Alley Dwelling Authority projects and experimental homes in Cameron Valley, Alexandria.

First stop on the tour were the new girls' dormitories in West Potomac Park, which are being built by Public Buildings Administration and are 60 per cent complete. Feature of these temporary dwellings, constructed of cemesto board, are brick stairs towers which are considered splinter proof, but not bomb proof. These dormitories are considered "slow-burning" construction, with the brick towers acting as fire stops also.

Cameron Valley Unit

Most interesting from the standpoint of variety were the experimental dwellings in Cameron Valley, managed by the Alexandria Housing Authority.

There were four types of construction, rammed earth, cement slab, bitulithic block and a combination of rammed earth and bitulithic block. The rammed earth units were made from sand and clay poured in a mold with a small percentage of cement. The marks of the boards showed plainly on the outside. Low-cost dwellings, these had definite disadvantages, notably contraction of the walls. They are heated with gas furnaces at the high cost of $35 a month, a cost which includes other utilities as well.

Bitulithic blocks are made from oil, clay and sand poured wet in molds. The combination of rammed earth and bitulithic blocks made an interesting pattern. Reminiscent of foreign building were the cement block houses perched high on a terrace in this development.

Typical Dwelling

Representative of the Alley Dwelling Authority's construction was the development at Thirty-Fifth Street and Reservoir Road Northwest. These are one, two and three bedroom units, each with living room, kitchen and bath.

War's grim necessities were shown in the fact that most of the closets were without doors in order to save metal hardware. Curtains, it was explained, would have to do for the duration to hide whatever skeletons might lurk within.

Another wartime feature were the huge coal stoves which heated these ADA units. Heat for the upper floors comes from the pipes. Difficulty in insulation because of manufacturer's shortages have delayed rental of some of these units. The buildings were attractive outside and extremely well planned within.

On Leased Land

Like many of the ADA projects these are built on leased land and are demountable. They are built to last 35 years, with one change of site. They will be sold within a year after the end of the present emergency. Rents are $41, $43 and $45.

With few exceptions these developments are open only to war-workers who have come into the District since July 1, 1941.

Among permanent housing projects developed under Lanham funds are Stoddert Dwellings, Highland, Washington, Bellevue, Knox Hill, Greenbelt, Forest Glen, Cabin John, Seven Locks, Cheltenham, Memorial View, Cameron Valley, Chinquapin Village, Ramsay Homes, Falls Church and Fort Belvoir.

Permanent projects developed by Defense Homes Corp. include Meridnia Hill, McLean Gardens, Naylor Gardens, Third and U, Second and Elm, Fairlington, Fairfax County.

D. C. Artists Reward Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown

Arts Club of Washington presents Juanita Carter, soprano (Theodore Schaefer, accompanist), and Karlian Meyer, pianist, on Thursday night. Program of songs by Franz Schubert, Francis Poulenc, Gian Carlo Menotti, Kenneth Christie and Johann Strauss 2d, and piano pieces by Chopin, Griffes, Debussy and Ravel.

Members and guests of the Arts Club enjoyed last evening a joint recital by two young Washingtonians progressive in their musicianship: Juanita Carter, nee Claxon, who has already gone as far as the Philadelphia Opera Company; and Karlian Meyer, who has advanced from a talented childhood into responsible work as a pianist and organist.

BROWN

They both disclosed elements of artistry which rewarded attention, for they are earnest seekers after the secret of interpretation and their performance showed insight.

Miss Carter has a mind of her own about programs, and her choice of songs indicate her independence of any formula in their making. This is a refreshing and promising trait in a young artist, as well as a healthy curiosity about the literature of the past and a lively interest in contemporary music. In her opening group of Schubert lieder, she companioned the familiar "Im Fruehling" with two delighful and neglected ones; "Ellens zweiter Gesang" and "So lasst mich scheinen."

Her second group introduced here Francis Poulenc's four "Airs" simply designated "Romantique," "Champetre," "Grave" and "Vif." Charming in their melodic lines and their atmospheric subtlety, these songs are not in Poulenc's ironic vein nor barbed with his wit. They are sincere expressions of poetic emotion, exquisite in workmanship and impeccable in style.

In her last group were combined Letitia's soliloquy from Gian Carlo Menotti's radio operatic farce, "The Old Maid and the Thief," one of the two really lyrical moments in that opus; two interesting, impressionistic songs by the American composer, Kenneth Christie—"Delia" and "Journey"—and the czardas from Johann Strauss' "The Flittermouse." The accompaniments by Theodore Schaefer were adjutant to the singer's intent.

Miss Meyer is still circumscribed by limitations in repertoire and her only ventures outside the circle was in the "Nocturne" by Charles Tomlinson Griffes, an excellent pastel in modern harmonic tints. She offered a Chopin group in the C sharp minor Etude, the E major Nocturne and the A flat major Ballade; Debussy's "General Lavine" and Ravel's "Fountains." Her playing has fluency, precision and good taste in tonal coloring.

Additional Land Acquired For Rock Creek

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission at its meeting yesterday announced that additional land had been acquired for Rock Creek Park. Traffic problems and the playground question also were discussed.

Norman C. Brown, land purchasing officer reported that two parcels in Soapstone Valley had been purchased to increase the park's area.

Other acquisitions announced were lots in Anacostia Park in the vicinity of the Lily Ponds, and a section which completes Fort Drive from Fort Reno to Rock Creek Park.

Playgrounds Approved

The commission approved construction of playgrounds in the District to take the place of those eliminated by temporary construction on the Mall. WPB has issued a stop order on this work.

Approved by the commission with the hope that work might be allowed were Anacostia Park, section D; East Potomac Park, tennis courts; Langston Terrace development, Randall Recreation Center adjacent to Canal Street Southeast; Hillcrest Recreation Center on Alabama Avenue near Naylor Road; Congress Heights playgrounds; Eckington Recreation Center, near McKinley.

After discussing traffic congestion at the Commodore Barney Circle in the Southeast section and the temporary streetcar loop at Fourteenth and Independence Avenue Southwest, approval was given to extending the area the Capital Transit uses for buses.

The commission inspected the temporary streetcar loop, and voted that use of the tracks would be discontinued when the permanent streetcar underpass opens about February 1. The temporary loop tracks are to be left two months to see whether the service over the permanent tracks is sufficient. If it is found insufficient, service will be resumed over the temporary loop.

Streets Closed

Several streets were closed in yesterday's action. All streets in Fort Dupont, east of Minnesota Avenue, streets at the end of East Capitol Street between Nineteenth Street and Anacostia River, one street at Coolidge Recreation Center in Takoma Park.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst and Thomas E. Jeffers, landscape architect, discussed ways of improving traffic at Columbia Road and Sixteenth Street Northwest and at Rhode Island Avenue and Florida Avenue Northwest.

The commission inspected the polo field, the upper part of which is used for parking and the lower part of which is being ploughed up again. They found the upper part "far from filled with cars" but there was some discussion of parking buses there which are used only during rush hours.

Landis Joins Auxiliary Police Fight

Issues Statement Commending Force; Citizens Federation Plans to Take Action

While James M. Landis, Director of the Office of Civilian Defense, entered the Auxiliary Police District Commissioners fight yesterday in a formal statement supporting the auxiliary, the Committee on Police and Fire Protection of the Federation of Citizens Associations prepared to bring the matter before the Federation Saturday night.

Percival J. Ableman, chairman of the committee, called a special meeting of the group at which it was decided (1) a special fund should be created to take care of auxiliary members injured in line of duty (2) none of this money should be taken out of regular police or firemen's fund (3) a special committee should be named to recommend a resolution on the whole question to report back Saturday.

Harry S. Wender, the federation president, asked that the committee be called together. The federation head, in his letter to Ableman, indicated that he took definite sides with the auxiliary in their fight to get a revision of the Commissioners' order compelling the auxiliary to revert to the status of blackout policemen only.

Statement by Landis

Earlier Landis made it clear that he realized the Commissioners were unable to allow the auxiliary to continue to function as regular police in view of a ruling by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to the effect they had legal status only in an air raid or practice blackout.

Landis said in part:

"Few communities in the country can be more appropriately classified as 'war-crowded' than the District. Most of the social problems which normally accompany 'war-crowding,' and some others as well have arisen in the District. Many of these problems are ones which would appear to require additional police protection.

"To this need for additional police protection there are two indicated solutions. The first would be to provide for a substantial increase in the regular police force. The question that arises here is, of course, that of reducing such a standing force after the community has returned to more normal conditions.

"Successful Pattern"

"The other solution is the training and use of volunteers, or 'special policemen,' for limited duties, leaving the regular police free to handle the more specialized and difficult duties. That is the pattern which the District has, until now, followed. The regular police have seemed to think it was a successful pattern.

"They have indicated repeatedly that they like the auxiliary police—like to work with them. The regular police have apparently developed a pattern for use of the auxiliary police. They have learned where to use them and where not to use them. They deserve great credit for the training they have given the auxiliary police who have repaid this obligation cheerfully."

Discussion at Capitol

The question of hospitalization of injured auxiliaries came up on Capitol Hill, where members of the District Commissioners told the House District Committee that the District has paid for the hospitalization of only one auxiliary and that no requests for payment have been rejected.

The statement was made in a letter to Chairman Randolph, answering a communication in which he asked them a group of questions concerning hours of duty and payment of medical expenses incurred for accidents occurring in line of duty.

The Commissioners, after explaining the recent ruling which placed the auxiliaries "on duty" only in raids or blackouts, said that there have been only a few cases of injury to members of the force. They added that these are comparatively recent and are under consideration now.

They warned, however, that "claims will, of necessity, have to be disapproved if the injuries were sustained when the auxiliary policeman was not on actual duty or functioning during a practice blackout or air raid alert." Disapproved cases, it was declared, would be referred to Federal authorities for aid.

Randloph's letter, asking the information, had noted that "in view of the fact that the Metropolitan Police are considered to be on 24-hour duty, it would seem natural for the auxiliary police to assume that they too were on 24-hour duty unless authoritatively informed otherwise."

Auxiliary Firemen Have Useless Pumps

District auxiliary firemen have 40 useless pumps and 600 "waterproof" coats that leak, Capt. C. A. Peterson of the District Fire Department told the Committee on Police and Fire Protection last night.

In addition, the approximately 1000 members of the auxiliary have 1500 pairs of rubber boots.

Sidelights in the Nation's Capital at War

A new first floor cafeteria has been opened at the Navy Department by the Welfare and Recreational Association. It has 1100 chairs and about 35,000 square feet of floor space, opens at 6:55 a. m. and serves breakfast until 7:50 a. m. Luncheon begins at 10:45 a. m. and continues until 2 p. m. Dinner is served from 4 until 8 p. m.

Children Honored In Art Competition

Two Washington school children received honorable mention in a Nation-wide art competition for children of public and private schools and art centers, it was announced yesterday. The Children's Art Center, 1744 K Street Northwest, sponsors of the contest, will open an exhibition of the works this Saturday from 3 to 6 p. m.

John Cabot, 8, of Potomac School, 2144 California Avenue Northwest, and Jeanne Tucker, 11, Friendship House, 619 D Street Southeast, are the local children whose pictures will be on exhibit.

Police Shirttails To Be 4 Inches Shorter

Priorities hit the Police Department this week—shirttails will be 4 inches shorter on all new shirts for patrolmen and officers.

The WPB ruled that the Police Department either had to dispense with pockets or part of the tails before permission to tailor 3000 shirts could be given.

Inspector Milton D. Smith, custodian of equipment, and his secretary decided upon an experiment. She sewed 4-inch tucks in three shirts and they were passed out to various sized officers. The tails, they reported, seemed as satisfactory as longer ones.

So, it was decided. The new shirts are to have patch pockets but 30-inch instead of 34-inch tails.

Robber-Assailant Flees Into Police Arms

Frank R. Smith of 14 I Street Northwest, a deaf mute, last night chased his robber-assailant into the arms of two First Precinct policemen after he had been robbed in a "yoke job" in the 500 block of G Street Northwest.

After being caught from behind and robbed of his wallet containing $1.56 Smith chased his assailant down Sixth Street Northwest, to Sixth and I Streets Northwest. There the man was captured by Policemen J. W. Hayes and C. R. Winemiller of the First Precinct. The robber is said to have been an old offender.

By Irene Ernhart

The story thus far: Jenny Arnold is regarded by many people, and particularly by her father, as an uncontrollable, spoiled brat. She runs around with a gay and frivolous, but wholly innocent, crowd of young people who have maintained their clique through high school and after graduation. Her brassy modernism is largely due, she knows—as does Bud Nelson—to her fear of ever revealing a true sentiment or emotion. The only time she ever breaks down was after she and Bud, out dancing with their crowd, see Jenny's mother, Celia, in the company of the debonair young dancing master, Tony Torrento. When Jenny gets home her father upbraids her for keeping such late hours, and it is with difficulty that she keeps from telling him about Celia. Jenny is awakened next morning to cope with a group of interior decorators summoned by her sister to do the house over. With the group is one stranger.

Chapter IV

"Madeline spoke of you. I'm Bill Winslow. And, by the way, where is Medeline? She promised to go out to lunch with me at that new place. Cherry Blossom Inn. They say it's quite amusing. Have you been there?"

Jenny stared. So this was Harvard! This was Bill Winslow! The one you read about in the papers so much, the one that did crazy things in night clubs, and sailed his own yacht, and was so rich that money didn't matter.

"Madeline?" Her voice croaked oddly. "She's still in bed. I'm afraid. I'll go up and see if she's forgotten." The last was quite stiff, and she was dimly aware that it replaced the friendly grin on his face with a slightly puzzled look.

Inside the house again she found herself trembling. She went upstairs, knocked on Madeline's door.

Opening the door a crack, Jenny stuck her head inside. "There's a snob named Winslow waiting downstairs for you. He's prowling in the garden."

"Darling," Madeline said, "you sound furious. What's the matter?"

Madeline's soft face reddened, and a look of guilt darkened her babyish blue eyes. "You don't mind my wearing it just this once," she wheedled.

She ran her hands over the hips of Jenny's new ivory crepe suit. Jenny had never worn it herself yet, had been saving it for something special.

"This is so—so important darling, and anyway it looks a lot better on me, because I have hips."

"Isn't Bill marvelous?" Madeline cooed. She gave the precise waves of her corn-silk hair another pat, and Jenny a sidelong glance.

Jenny, hands shoved in the pockets of the old riding breeches had already turned and was going out. "Everyone to his own taste," she said in muffled voice.

Time to Leave

She stamped downstairs again, and quickly, too, because she heard mother arguing with Crick about something and knew that in a moment she, too, would be summoned for something or other. And she couldn't face her mother this morning. That would be the last straw.

She slid out the back way and whistled for Briar.

It was the third time she whistled, a bit impatiently, that Briar came out through the rose trellis with Bill Winslow.

"Go on, she's calling you, old fellow," Bill urged in a deep laughing voice.

"Briar!" Jenny said sharply. "Come along this instant. Briar! Come here!"

Briar gave a short, indignant bark, and his beady black eyes shone at her through their tangle of ragged hair, but he didn't move. He looked up at Bill Winslow again.

"Go on, Briar. After all, you're her dog, you know."

Briar sat himself down on his haunches. Jenny felt her face turning red.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

"Here's a hand I held in a rubber bridge game the other night, but I didn't know quite what to do with it," writes N. G. C., of Washington. "This was the hand; I sat South:

♠ A 6 3
◇ Q J
♣ K Q 10 9 3

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?	—

"Does it look on the bidding so far as though there may be a slam somewhere? Also, what is my proper call over two spades?

North's bid of two spades, following his opening bid of one diamond, is a reverse. It shows a spade suit shorter than the diamonds, probably of only four cards, and since it forces North to carry the bidding to three diamonds in case he does not have four spades, it indicates a powerful hand. A slam, therefore, is very possible.

South, too, holds strength, and most good players would jump from two spades to three no trump to invite a slam. South puts the decision up to North because his own hand is weak, distributionally, in that his only short suit is one his partner has bid. If North expresses willingness to try for six-odd by bidding four diamonds over three no trump, South can go directly to six diamonds.

"What is my Culbertson response with this hand?" asks L. D. F., of New York, concerning her reply to partner's opening two-bid. She sat South, holding this hand, and North opened with two spades:

♡ A 8 4
◇ J 7 4 2
♣ K 7 5

Ely advises a response of three no trump with this holding. "In responding to a forcing two-bid," he writes, "bid three no trump on a hand containing one and a half honor tricks but no biddable suit nor trump support. The one and a half honor tricks may be in one suit (as ace queen-small) or divided among two or more suits."

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Many a mother, in these days of exceptional opportunities for the woman worker, wonders whether she would not be more sensible to put someone in charge of her children and go out of the home to earn some of this "easy" money.

It is a great temptation to escape the monotonous drudgery of housework, to add materially to the family income, and to work in the company of her peers instead of constantly in the company of unappreciative children.

That it is a mistake—if it can be avoided—is the consensus of all those who have studied this pertinent question. The statistics on the increasing vagrancy and delinquency of these motherless children are appalling to read.

To help mothers understand how to manage small children, send a self-addressed, 3-cent stamped envelope with your request for my leaflets, "Early Discipline" and "Obedience and Punishment." Address your letter to the "Your Baby and Mine" department of this newspaper.

It Might Be Worse

Yes, only 13 pounds of butter a year now for each of us! Three pounds less than last year! How will we cook? How will we eat our hot cakes? How on earth will we live?

Butter is almost unknown in France, Greece, Poland, most of the Nazi-occupied countries of Furope, as most of the cows have been slaughtered to feed Nazi armies. Denmark's butter has been taken by Germany. Small allowances of butter are made in Germany to children and pregnant women—provided the latter are true Germans. In England a ration of one egg a month is now provided for adults. Butter and milk are reserved for children and pregnant women.

Yes, no canned citrus fruit juice for awhile now. We'll have to squeeze our oranges, dig out our grapefruit. And fresh fruit is always such a nuisance!

In England there has been no lemons, grapefruits or bananas for years. Orange juice is reserved for children. Peaches were recently reported at $1.20 apiece. Jewish children in Nazi occupied countries receive no fruit at all.

Yes, it seems a lot of fuss to tell just how many cans of this and that we have in the house. What's the difference if we don't quite enumerate all of it to the rationers? Who will ever know about those few extra cans of apricot nectar?

In Germany the hoarding of food is punishable by death.

Yes, you can't get any decent meat any more either in restaurant or store. What on earth will we eat?

Japanese live chiefly on soy beans, rice and fish. The Greeks have been susbsisting on bread, olives, cheese and fish—and now the bread is generally lacking. When it is available they stand in lines for hours to get 4-ounce rations of a hard black product. The French meat ration last summer was a half pound a week.

Yes, the Government is having the nerve to take a victory tax out of our pay checks. And as for the regular income taxes—well how is a girl to live any more?

A girl in a Japanese munitions factory, who is paid on a half-scale to men, doesn't collect her own wages. Her father does. If she is married, she puts her earnings into the family budget and her husband decrees what she shall spend.

Yes, service is getting worse every day. You wait—and wait—for food and laundry and dry cleaning until you nearly go mad.

There are no food deliveries in England. There are fewer laundries, and families are limited to what they can send. Prices have increased 25 per cent. A German must wait four to six weeks to get back dry cleaning.

Yes, working on Saturdays makes it hard. And all the overtime! So shopping or play! How can we stand it?

Many women in England, war widows, young girls, grandmothers, often work 60 hours a week and then do air raid duty. Housewives often work 9 hours at a factory, return home to prepare dinner and clean house. On Sundays they do the family wash.

Yes, life is tough here, with all the rationing and taxes and bureaucrats and bossiness. What are we coming to? What's the matter with Congress? What's the matter with the President? Somebody's got to do something! Turn the rascals out!

In Germany people ride on streetcars in silence, not daring to discuss public affairs for fear they may be overheard by the Gestapo. Radios are silent except when they blare out government communiques or announcements to which everyone is required to listen reverently. Newspapers carry only monotonous censored reports. Yes, life is tough here—but it might be tougher. It might be so tough we couldn't complain about what was going on and blame somebody for it.

Your Figure, Madame!

Exercise Should Be a Complete Change From What You Do All Day

By Ida Jean Kain

Tall or short, home maker or war worker, brunette or silver-haired, the one measurement you want to slim down is your hips. The only thing you can do about that is exercise. But if you will choose exercises that balance your work they will increase your energy, help you relax, improve your posture, and put you in shape generally.

If you have to stand up to your job most of the day, take your exercises lying down.

1. Lying on back on mat with knees fleexed and feet on floor close to buttocks. Bend one knee up toward chest, hold for a second, lower to floor. While doing the exercise, keep the small of the back pressed flat against the floor and as the foot is placed on floor also relax stomach and back muscles. Repeat five times with one leg, then the other.

2. Lying on back on floor, one knee flexed and foot on floor close to hips, other leg straight down, arms stretched out from shoulders on floor at sides. Swing the straight leg up and over and try to touch toes to fingers of opposite hand. Return to position and repeat. Rest and perform with other leg.

3. Lie on side on floor, legs straight down, hand on floor chest level for brace. Raise upper leg and swing out in front, then, keeping in same level, swing away out in back and up still higher. Return to position, relax and repeat. You can really go to town on that exercise. It slims your hips and flattens your stomach. When you have finished with one side, perform on other.

If you sit down to work, you will get more out of standing to exercise. Here is a double-duty set for you.

1. Stand with one hand on chairback at side for support and swing other leg from hip, knee straight, up and out in front, then away up in back. Keep swinging, 30 counts, then rest and repeat with other leg.

2. Face chairback, both hands on it for support. Keep both knees straight and hips still but raise right foot clear of floor, point the toe hard, and circle leg out sideward and backward. Circle 15 to 20 times, then lower leg and relax. Repeat with left leg.

The "Look" For Spring

By Jeanne Contini

"Look" is frankly trade lingo . . . it describes more accurately than any other word a single calculated impression composed of small details which can vary considerably from costume to costume. As it was vampish in the 20's, glamour girl in the 30's, so this year it is appropriately clean, fresh, and smooth. On the margin are the four leading types that best express the new look after which most of the new clothes are patterned, and some of the addenda that help to establish the effect.

The Gibson Girl . . . symbol of crisp prettiness. Shirt-waist and skirt, her favorite costume, is one of the charming spring styles particularly for the small figure. It is made as a one-piece dress, often with a plaid taffeta top and a navy or black wool skirt.

Ruffles, jabots, lingerie . . . all the sweet, graceful highly feminine trimmings appear at the neckline, sleeves, and at the hips in peplums. These accents above the waist help make a slim silhouette look attractive on even a not so slim figure by flattering and high-lighting the face and arms.

The Piquant Schoolgirl . . . lots of navy blue with white pique, formula for a fresh, scrubbed appearance. Sailor collar and little berets, spotless cuffs and pleated skirts . . . young tailored clothes to give you the maximum of efficiency and the maximum of charm.

Stripes . . . licorice and raspberry on taffeta for dresses, hats, and accessories. Chalk striped menswear flannel for trim slender suits.

Checks . . . every kind except the ones that bounce. In all fabrics but mainly suitings . . . hound's-tooth and shepherd-checked tweed, soft pin-checked woolen.

Bows . . . at the throat of a pretty blouse, at the hip of a dinner gown. Neat in pique, full and flowing in chiffon.

The Dandy . . . short Beau Brummel jackets with high wide lapels . . . fitted with precision and neat as a band-box. The smooth figure-revealing lines balance well with narrow skirts. You'll see some of these worn with gold watch chains and white kid gloves.

Button front dresses . . . or buttoned down the side . . . a smooth, casual fashion for the street, softer than the classic shirtwaist type but just as wearable. Buttons are non-priority of course and so are ties which look new as a clothing and are very decorative.

Toppers . . . short straight versatile little coats that can be thrown over suits or evening clothes. The velvet-collared chesterfield and the mandarin version with the small high collar continue to be shown. New looking is the tuxedo front, which is a long flattering line particularly for larger figures. The front panels are often done in contrast . . . as checked with monotone tweed, or shetland with velvet.

The Waist-coat . . . is exerting a strong influence. On dresses in pointed seaming at the hip-yoke, on suits with contrasting sleeves or short cut-away jackets, on blouses and gilets with weskit fronts and tailored bow ties. As itself to wear with suits.

Housing Situation Presages Epidemic, Says Local Director

An epidemic of serious proportions was predicted yesterday by Marvin Wire, director of the Washington War Housing Agency, unless adequate housing is provided for thousands of workers making under $1500 yearly in non-essential industries.

Because these employes are forced by the present housing shortage to live under "extremely unsanitary conditions—sometimes with as many as seven people living in a single room, often with only a wood stove for heat," Wire stressed the need for providing quarters that will fill their needs.

Major difficulty, he added, is that such non-vital employes cannot become eligible for aid from the local war housing agency because they do not come under the heading of defense workers.

Top price they can afford to pay in rent, he pointed out, is 25 per cent of their income, which means a maximum of $25 monthly for the $1200 brackets. Accommodations in such a price range are "practically zero," he said.

In addition, Wire went on, there cannot be adequate housing for the low-income group during the war emergency because of War Production Board curtailment of vital materials for building purposes. The shortage of such materials means that there will not be sufficient quarters even for the war workers of the same income, he said.

"The great need today is for single rooms for girls in the vicinity of Arlington, Georgetown and Southeast Washington, near Bolling Field," he told The Post.

Rationing Made Easy

Within the next month or two, each of us in the United States (from the new-born babe to great-great-grandmother) will receive a new War Ration Book. War Ration Book II will be used to obtain goods—notably canned goods and meats—which will be rationed under a new system known as the "point" system.

WHAT IS POINT RATIONING? It is a system of rationing a group of related or similar commodities which can be substituted for one another in actual use. Point rationing will not replace straight coupon rationing of sugar, gasoline and coffee. The point system and War Ration Book II will be used for certain new rationing programs. The straight coupon system may be used for other new rationing programs where suitable.

WHY IS THE POINT SYSTEM NECESSARY? The point system will be used to ration certain commodities for which the straight coupon system is not suitable. It would provide a fairer and better system of rationing for certain kinds of goods, such as canned goods and meats. For example, suppose the Government were to ration bran flakes the way it is rationing sugar—an equal amount for everyone each month. Because of the shortage and because bran flakes would thus be allotted to many people who don't eat them, the result would be a very small share for each individual. This might mean a buying rush on cornflakes by those who usually eat branflakes, thus creating a shortage of cornflakes. Similar shortages would probably occur in other cereals and the original rationing would be of no value. Under point rationing all cereals would be grouped and rationed together and the consumer would use his ration book for all of them, or whichever ones he prefer.

HOW DOES POINT RATIONING WORK? The Government will group together a number of similar or related commodities and the same ration coupons will be used to buy any of these commodities. Everyone in the country will be entitled to use a certain number of points each month out of Ration Book II to buy the commodities in the group. The Government will give each commodity in the group a "point value." A low point-value will be given to the commodity which is most plentiful and a high point-value will be given to a commodity which is scarcer than usual.

HOW WILL RATION BOOK II BE USED? The stamps in Ration Book II are the "rationing currency" each person can spend under the point system. A person who restricts his buying largely to the things that have low point values will get more for his stamps.

There are three main things the consumer should remember about Ration Book 11:

1. The color of the stamps (there are to be four pages of blue stamps and four pages of red) identifies the rationed commodities. Blue stamps are for canned and frozen foods; red will later be used for meats.

2. The letter of the alphabet on the stamp designates the ration period during which the stamp may be used. These periods will be announced in advance.

3. The number on the stamp is its point value. There will be four "denominations"—1, 2, 5 and 8.

The storekeeper uses the point stamps he collects to buy from his supplier. This supplier, in turn, uses the stamps to buy from the canner or meat packer.

The housewife will have to keep two "prices" in mind when she does her shopping: first, the "cost" in ration points and second the cost in dollars and cents.

Shortly After Getting Engaged, Girl Meets Man With Whom She Feels Perfect Companionship; He Is Now Overseas and Fiance Is Urging Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 20 years of age, living here in Washington. Early last fall, I became engaged to a young man whom I thought I truly loved. However, no date was set, there was no ring and I continued seeing other friends and going out. Some weeks later, I met another young man who was visiting his parents here. From our first meeting, it seemed as if we had known each other always. During the two weeks he was here, I met his family and friends and was favorably accepted by them.

He told me he loved me, although we had known each other only 12 days. I knew that the feeling I had for him was different from any I had ever experienced; but I did not tell him this, because I did not feel free to do so. He is now overseas. He writes regularly and seems to include me in his plans for the future. I find myself thinking of him more every day; remembering every detail of that glorious two weeks. The feeling of complete trust and perfect companionship cannot be denied. I never have felt so natural with the boy to whom I am engaged, who is now in officers' training school and has asked me to marry him when he receives his commission. Could I possibly marry him when I share so much feeling with another man? Would it be fair to either man—or to myself? R. R.

Unwise to Proceed With Marriage Plans

DEAR R. R.: It would be worse than unfair to yourself and your current fiance—it would be most unwise—to marry him, when it has been clearly demonstrated that your surface interest in him leaves your essential personality untouched and detached to such a degree that another man can come along and, just by being himself, engage you in a much more authentic and satisfying brand of companionship—which carries over, after months of separation, in "glorious" memories of "perfect" understanding, natural and effortless, that crowds your fiance into a far corner of your mind and affections.

Whether the fine feeling you share with the second man ever will lead to marriage is beside the point, when trying to accurately interpret the signs and portents of the present situation and your worried indecisiveness regarding it. The crucial point, already established, which should definitely determine your future course in relation to your fiance, is the fact that you love him so little that you can love another man more, with a great sense of inevitability and rightness; and that, mind you, just a few weeks after getting engaged. This development, combined with the fact of your tender age, suggests that as time goes on and your viewpoint matures and your interests broaden, you might find yourself at a later date even more strongly and sympathetically attracted to yet another man than this second chap who seems to be your "soul mate" today.

Heart's on Lookout For Better Answer

Imagine the predicament, social and emotional, you would be in today, if you had gotten married shortly after the engagement was made; and then had met the other fellow (who is now overseas) and immediately felt that he was the man for you; the man you should have waited for. If it hadn't happened with him, it probably would have happened with some other man, since obviously your heart was still on the lookout for a better answer to prayer than your fiance represents to you—even if your conscious mind wasn't aware of it. Also, since your fiance already has lost much of his appeal for you, even as a beau, you may be sure you would find him intolerable as a husband. So, whether or not you marry the second chap, you ought to break the engagement at once, and turn your fiance loose to find the girl who will delight in loving him with her whole heart. Thus, at the same time, of course, keeping the door open for the coming of true love into your own life.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Feud With Wall St.-Backed Cuban Sugar Interests

CORDELL HULL, who as an ex-Congressman detests lobbyists, especially sugar lobbyists, is waging a silent but potent feud against the big sugar interests of Cuba.

Actually, Cuba itself has very little to do with it. It is the big Wall Street sugar companies, dominated by the Chase National Bank and the National City Bank, which have aroused Secretary Hull's Tennessee ire. He is out to break their strangle hold on our island neighbor.

Behind the feud is the fact that last year Jesse Jones' Defense Supplies, Inc., purchased the entire Cuban sugar crop at a very high price, and now we find ourselves with 1,600,000 tons of sugar left in Cuba, plus 65,000,000 gallons of invert syrup, plus 70,000,000 gallons of black-strap molasses.

We needed the syrup and molasses for making alcohol. Also we feared a sugar shortage. But we did not figure on the submarine and shipping crisis, which now makes it almost impossible to move the above balance out of Cuba.

None of this was Jesse Jones' fault, except possibly the high price—which gave the big sugar companies and their New York bankers a profit of $60,000,000 to $80,000,000.

Sugar Goes to Waste

HOWEVER, Cuba now wants us to buy the current sugar crop, and we don't want it. We already have 1,600,000 tons in Cuba which we can't move, plus syrup and molasses, so there is no reason in the world for buying more.

The Cuban Government, however, points out that it cannot sell its sugar unless it sells to us, and with our market gone the island will be bankrupt, will face riots and revolution.

The State Department is sympathetic to the Cuban viewpoint and has suggested that Cuba diversify its crops, planting peanuts, which are badly needed here, plus fiber crops for making rope, no longer obtainable from the Philippines. The State Department also has offered a loan to improve the central highway running the length of the island.

However, the Cuban Government is reluctant. They say they have been raising sugar for 400 years, that they understand sugar, and they don't want to diversify now.

Wall Street Runs Cuba

REAL FACTOR behind the Cuban Government, however, is the big sugar companies and their Wall Street backers. They not only brought pressure on President Batista not to accept the State Department's generous compromise, but they are now waging a propaganda campaign against Secretary Hull.

Mr. Hull has just discovered that the sugar companies have raised a secret kitty of one million dollars to buy radio time and carry on newspaper propaganda against the State Department's proposal, in order to force a purchase of the next Cuban sugar crop. Already Cuban newspapers have started the campaign.

Secretar Hull, however, is standing pat. He believes that the New York financiers got enough profit out of the 60 million to 80 million dollar bonanza that came their way through Jesse Jones' deal, and that Cuba, sooner or later must throw off its Wall Street yoke.

Capital Chaff

CONGRESSMAN Will Rogers of California has definitely turned down Warner Brothers' plea that he play the part of his father in the film they are doing of the famous humorist. Young Will thinks that his new duties in Congress are too important and that he cannot be trotting back and forth to Hollywood. "I do not intend to make any picture at all until after the war is won and the peace is settled," he says . . . Now that all pleasure driving is out, it will be interesting to watch the future driving of White House Secretary William McReynolds, who not long ago loaded up his car with guests at one party and delivered them first to Virginia and then to nearby Maryland—in his official car . . . Paul P. Cret, celebrated Philadelphia architect, is designing a private railroad car for President Vargas of Brazil, to be manufactured by E. G. Budd, also of Philadelphia . . . Raymond Massey, who starred in "Abe Lincoln of Illinois," is the envy of all Hollywood. He is the only actor to anyone's knowledge who has already paid his 1942 income taxes, not due until March 15. He had to pay them before the United States Government would let him out of the country to join the Canadian army. As a Canadian colonel, he now gets $4000 a year—less than he paid his servants in Hollywood.

F. D. R.'s Surprise

ONE THING that didn't get out about the "surprise" party at the White House for Speaker Sam Rayburn, on Sam's sixty-first birthday, was a little frill added by the President.

Rayburn was called to the White House with other congressional leaders, ostensibly to discuss the legislative program for the new session. But when the group arrived all but Rayburn were ushered into the private office of Economic Stabilizer Jimmy Byrnes.

The Speaker was told that the President wished to see him alone for a few minutes.

The two men discussed legislative problems for a few minutes. Meantime the President was keeping a sharp eye on the clock. Suddenly he broke out:

"Sam, the reason I asked you to come in here alone was to discuss a personal matter that has been worrying me."

Rayburn eyed him curiously, said nothing.

"It's about you, Sam," continued the President without batting an eyelash. "We're old friends and I feel I can talk to you frankly. I've got reports from Capitol Hill that the Democrats are dissatisfied with your leadership. They think you're getting too old to be Speaker."

At that precise moment Democratic Congressmen Cliff Woodrum of Virginia, Bob Ramspeck of Georgia, Republican Leader Joe Martin of Massachusetts, Representative Jim Wadsworth of New York and other House members burst into the President's office, led by Jimmy Byrnes.

Together they began singing "Happy Birthday to You" at the top of their voices.

"That was perfect timing, fellows," beamed the President. He had planned it all very carefully himself."

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Win War First, Then Peace, Waring Urges

Roane Waring, national commander of the American Legion, here for a Legion conference on Congressional Committees, said in an interview yesterday that "the country needs to stop dreaming about the war ending in 1943 or 1944 and what we are going to do when it does end—let's win the war first.

"Speculating on when the war will end tends only to lower the fighting morale on the home front," Waring said. "And while it is true that the home front cannot win the war—our soldiers must do that—it is just as true that if we lose this war, it will be because we have lost the battle of the production lines."

Waring frequently referred to his speech of last Monday night in which he said that while labor and management are doing a "good job on the whole," such production hindrances as absenteeism are very often the result of "loose talk on how soon the war will end and how easily we will win it, given the time and the material."

Waring attended the Federal Bar Association luncheon, at which Ambassador Joseph Grew spoke, and said he was very much impressed by Grew's remarks.

"What the peace will be depends entirely on how long the war is and what happens between now and the final battle," he said. "And the Japs are tough."

Asked for comment on the new Congress, the Memphis utility executive said he believes that Congress should not attempt to guide the military strategy of the war, although he thinks Congress should not allow the executive to override its powers.

Bean Family Steps Out As Victory Food Special To Aid Food Situation

The busy man in the advertising department, the secretary in an adjacent office, and the rugged individual in the sport's department, are all asking me one question—"What's the Answer to the Baked Bean Situation?"

Such queries are evidence that this traditional food is a general favorite. Since it has been decreed that canned baked beans are on the "No No" list of the Government, it's up to cooks to get out the old bean pot and bake this truly American dish which really seems to hit the spot.

Baked beans rightly have an added appeal these days because most homemakers must keep a check on the family purse strings in order to keep the food budget somewhere near the line. Baked beans also merit a place in the diet because of their iron content. Iron is needed in the building of blood, and so is an essential element. Beans contain body-building protein of fair quality and also a source of vitamin B.

These crisp January days give one a hankerin' for substantial food like baked beans. Everyone seems to have their own pet version of baked beans. Some like them with molasses and salt pork, some like them glistening under a rich luscious tomato sauce. However you like them, be sure to let the bean family step out onto your menus some time from January 18 to 23, because dry edible beans are the Victory Food Special for that period.

By using dry edible beans you will help conserve other less plentiful foods needed for the war. So get out the bean pot, casserole and make up some beans that you can boast have thrift plus elegance.

Given here is a recipe for Boston baked beans and two other recipes using beans. Team the beans with steamed brown bread, a tossed green salad, and fresh fruit or other light dessert and a beverage and you have an A-1 meal.

BOSTON BAKED BEANS

To serve eight people, wash 4 cups dry navy beans and soak for 3 hours in boiling water to cover. Preserve the minerals and vitamins by cooking the beans in the water in which they were soaked, adding extra water if needed to cover well. Bring to boil, skim, and cook slowly for about 50 minutes or until beans are tender. Drain beans (reserving cooking water) and turn into bean pot or large casserole. Scrape rind of ½ pound salt pork until white; score top by cutting down about 1 inch, and bury in beans with rind exposed. Mix together 1 cup pure molasses, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 tablespoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and 3 cups water, reserved from cooking beans. Pour this mixture over beans, cover and bake in slow oven (320 degrees F.) for 3½ hours, uncovering casserole during last hour of baking. If necessary, add more water during baking.

SAVORY BEANS WITH BREAST OF LAMB

Soak 1 pound dried pea beans overnight in boiling water to cover. Drain. Cover with cold water, adding ½ teaspoon soda, and cook until tender. Drain.

Fry 4 slices diced salt pork in a deep skillet until browned. Remove from pan and saute 4 sliced onions and 4 cloves chopped garlic until browned. Remove the garlic and onions. Brush 1½ pounds lamb breast which has been cut in 2-inch squares with 3 tablespoons flour, and brown. Add ½ teaspoon sugar as the meat is browning. Add 3 cups boiling water, salt pork, onions, 2½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon thyme, ½ teaspoon marjoram, ½ teaspoon sweet basil, ½ teaspoon parsley (dried) and 1 teaspoon dry mustard. Cover; bring to a boil and cook over low heat 1 hour or until meat is tender.

Place meat in bottom of casserole and top with beans. Cover with meat liquid and bean liquid. Cover dish and bake in slow oven (250 degrees F.) 2 hours or until done. Uncover during last half hour. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

BEEF SHORT RIBS AND NAVY BEANS

Cover 1 pound (2 cups) navy beans with water, add 2 tablespoons molasses, 2 sliced onions, 1 teaspoon salt, and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Simmer gently for several hours, until tender. Brown 3 pounds beef short ribs in a little fat. Season with salt and pepper. Place beans in an open pan, and put meat on top. Bake at 350 degrees until meat is tender (about 1 hour). Add more water to pan as necessary. You may like to pour ½ cup catsup or chili sauce over the meat as it cooks. Serves six.

Ambulance Driver Wins Two Medals

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—The American Field Service said today it had received word that John D. Dun, 50-year-old volunteer ambulance driver of Tucson, Ariz., had received the Medaille Militaire and the Croix de Guerre from the French fighting forces for extreme heroism in Libya.

The American Field Service said that Dun, cattle rancher and formerly of the Toledo, Ohio, Times, maintained an all-night vigil last October over two ambulances filled with wounded which had become stuck in soft sand, right in the center of intensive shelling. Dun saved the lives of 10 men—another was killed in his arms.

EASY? YES! To make home-cooked vegetable noodle soup, all you do is empty the package into boiling water, add butter, simmer. What package? Our new product, called "Betty Crocker Vegetable Noodle Soup Ingredients." A work-saver!

OPA Denies 'Hush-Money' Extortions

By the Associated Press

Price Administrator Leon Henderson last night denied charges by Representative Herter (Republican) of Massachusetts that the OPA extorted "hush money" from price ceiling violators and said the taking of voluntary contributions for violation of Federal regulations was originated by Herbert Hoover as Food Administrator in the first World War.

Henderson declared that voluntary payments to the Treasury were accepted only in cases "where the violator admits the overcharge and freely agrees to settle the matter in this manner." Complete information on the policy, he added, has been given to Congress and the public in quarterly reports.

Herter declared that the procedure "has no sanction either in law or in conscience" and that it was "perilously close to blackmail." OPA agents, he said, are powerless to give a violator legal immunity.

Compounding a Felony

"They cannot secure the violator against a civil suit by the overcharged customer, and if there is a basis for criminal prosecution, any hush-up in consideration of a money payment is in itself a criminal act," he added. "It is compounding a felony. The fact that the money reaches the Federal Treasury makes no difference."

Asserting that "this shocking and utterly indefensible practice ought to be exposed," Herter said it should be ended "not simply by a promise of OPA officials to cease and desist but by such explicit legislative action as will prohibit the OPA or any agency of the Government and any bureaucrat at any time hereafter from pursuing such a policy."

In citing a "well established precedent" for the practice followed by OPA, Henderson said Hoover originated the policy of requesting violators to refund any excess charges or to make an equivalent contribution to the Red Cross.

Hoover Unchallenged

Such refunds or contributions were made in 4123 cases when Hoover was Food Administrator, Henderson said, and Hoover's authority to accept them "was never challenged either in the courts or in Congress."

Other Federal agencies make similar adjustments in cases that do not involve willful violation, the Price Administrator said. Under the grazing act, the Interior Department accepts money payments in settlement of damages done through the grazing of livestock on the Federal range without a permit. The Labor Department, he said, has adjusted many cases of violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act through payment by the employer to his employes, although the act confers no express authority for such back wage payments.

"Since the treble damage provision in the Emergency Price Control Act became effective on July 31, 1942. There have been very few cases in which OPA has accepted voluntary contributions," Henderson's statement said. "There have been a few occasions involving retail sales where the seller has overcharged a large number of persons whose names are not known. Voluntary contributions have been accepted in settlement of these."

An OPA spokesman said these payments amounted to about $400,000.

Gen. Patton Sent Yanks Ashore Saying 'We Do Not Surrender'

United States invasion forces were sent ashore on North Africa with a reminder by Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., commander of the western task forces, that "Americans do not surrender" and an assurrance that "we shall surely win."

The text of orders issued to the American soldiers of his command on the eve of their landing on the coast of French North Africa on November 8 was made public yesterday by the War Department.

The orders were read over the public address system by the commander of troops aboard each transport the night before they disembarked. They follow:

We are to be congratulated because we have been chosen as the units of the United States Army best trained to take part in this great American effort.

We are now on our way to force a landing of the coast of northwest Africa.

Three-Fold Mission

Our mission is threefold:

First, to capture a beachhead and secure an airport;

Second, to capture the city of Casablanca and secure its harbor for our use; and Third, to move against the German wherever he may be and destroy him.

In making our landing we will be opposed by units of the French African army, composed of both white and colored troops. It is regrettable that we must destroy all of these gallant foes who oppose us and who at heart are sympathetic to us, but such is the stern necessity of war. However, when any of these soldiers seek to surrender, you will accept it and treat them with respect due to brave enemies—remember, they are not Nazis or Japs.

Navy Supports

In our landing, we will be supported by the full might of the American Navy and our own air force, both from the sea and from the air. You have been carefully trained in landing operations in conjunction with the Navy.

When the great day of battle comes, remember your training, and remember above all that speed and violence of attack are the sure road to success, and you must succeed—for to retreat is as cowardly as it is fatal. Indeed, once landed, retreat is impossible. Americans do not surrender.

During the first few days and nights after you get ashore, you must work unceasingly, regardless of sleep, regardless of food. A pint of sweat will save a gallon of blood.

The eyes of the world are watching us; the heart of America beats for us; God is with us. On our victory depends the freedom or slavery of the human race. We shall surely win.

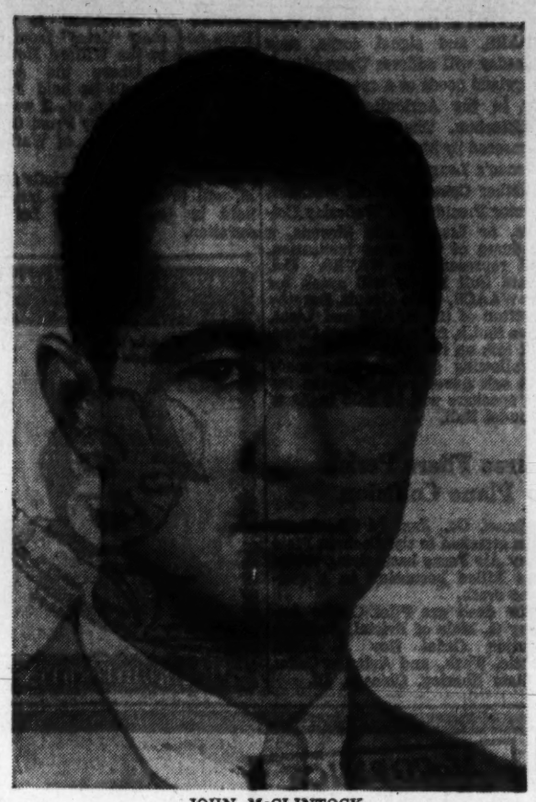
TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Post Profile — John McClintock

Rockefeller's New Assistant Looks Like Sophomore

He looks like a Harvard sophomore with his thick horn-rimmed glasses and his pipe which he smokes constantly; he unconsciously wears his hat turned up at the brim in an angle on the side of his head. Beneath this youthful facade is one of Washington's most serious-minded and interesting "comers," with an inter-American obsession! His name? John McClintock, youngest of Nelson Rockefeller's three assistant coordinators.

Shy and reserved, yet possessed of great drive and efficiency, McClintock runs Mr. Rockefeller's very enlightened Basic Economy Program, a vital and strategic plan for mutual aid among the Americas in war and in peace. Comprising three fields of activity, the Basic Economy Program includes health and sanitation work, food supply and emergency rehabilitation. Operating through the corporate medium of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, an agency of the coordination office, technical and financial details are worked out and plans are made for long-term projects as well as immediate war needs. "We are now working in 16 countries in the other Americas," said Mr. McClintock in a recent interview. "We are trying to improve health and laboring conditions in areas of strategic importance as well as increase the production of needed war materials, such as rubber, tin, tungsten and sisal," he continued.



JOHN McCLINTOCK

Health Program Is Cooperative

Now operating with 50 Americans in the field (including tropical medicine experts, agricultural technicians and engineers) as well as 15,000 nationals of the other Americas, this program under Mr. McClintock's direction is carrying out specific recommendations of the Rio Conference and supplementing them. "The programs are carried out on a cooperative basis," explained Mr. McClintock. "Half of the money for the work is given by the country involved, as well as a large percentage of the materials and services. The program is carried on through the interested departments of the particular host government." Already, much has been accomplished; health and sanitation work has been undertaken in the Amazon Basin areas of Brazil, Peru, Bolivia, Colombia and Ecuador; the food supply of the rubber workers has been greatly increased and emergency rehabilitation has been successfully undertaken in El Oro Province, Ecuador.

As usual, Mr. Rockefeller couldn't have chosen a better qualified man to execute his pet human defense program. Although only 33, John McClintock has spent most of his life concerning himself with the other Americas. Specializing academically in Latin-American history, he later learned to speak perfect Spanish and Portuguese. He spent two years in South America after college learning foreign trade, traveling through all the American republics.

Organized Own Development Business

Returning to the United States, he became assistant general passenger agent for the Matson Navigation in San Francisco, and among other things, organized their South American cruises. Next, he ran his own successful development business in Latin America, which he left in 1939 to join the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in Washington.

Since he joined the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American affairs in October of 1940, his competence and ability have advanced him at a rapid gait. Starting as a commodity specialist, he has emerged not only as an assistant coordinator but also vice president of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs and executive secretary of the Inter-American Development Commission.

Known for Good Nature

Popular with the entire Office of Inter-American Affairs, McClintock is known for his good nature, his well-organized mind, and his systematically run office. Devoted to his good-looking young wife and his three small children, he spends all spare time with them.

Asked what part he thought the Americans would play in the postwar world, Mr. McClintock grinned in his pleasant way and said enthusiastically, "A very great part; Latin America is one of the few areas that is still growing and developing. I feel that after the war there will be a widespread intellectural and material investment in the Americas, all of which will point toward good results in the form of a permanent united front in the Western Hemisphere."

Oddments of Interest Easy to Find at Luncheon Time On Capitol Hill; 2-Year-Old Frozen Quail Oddest of All

When a member of the British Parliament, L. D. Gammans, was late for his luncheon date yesterday with Senator Alben Barkley, the latter didn't mind a bit. The delay gave the genial Senate Majority Leader a chance to join a small party at which his erstwhile colleague, William H. Smathers and Mrs. Smathers were hosts in the Senate restaurant.

ALBEN BARKLEY

In Washington for a brief stay from their New Jersey home, former Senator and Mrs. Smathers made a special trip to Capitol Hill to greet Senator Albert W. Hawkes, Smathers' successor.

"I congratulated him; told him I hoped the job didn't kill him, and mentioned incidentally that I was having the time of my life just being a private citizen again," Smathers said at the luncheon. He and his pretty wife recently returned from Florida, where they spent Christmas.

Among those in their small luncheon party yesterday were Mrs. Hugo Black and Mrs. Lister Hill who engaged in a bit of housewifely interchange before the party assembled. Mrs. Black, coming in from Alexandria on the bus, arrived with the biggest Persian lamb muff seen around these parts this season. And there was more than her dainty hands inside. The muff, in fact, concealed a mammoth punch ladle which Mrs. Hill was borrowing for a birthday party she is giving this evening for her 14-year-old daughter, Henrietta.

MRS. BLACK

It was after Mrs. Black had generously consented to lend the ladle that the problem of transportation arose. She could find no box big enough to hold it, and she didn't fancy herself boarding a bus with the item wrapped and under her arm. The muff saved the day.

All the Way From Manchuria . . .

The powers that be in the Senate restaurant have found one especially good substitute for beef. It's Manchurian quail; appears on the luncheon menu as "roast partridge with wild rice;" and is quite a popular item despite its high price.

"If we don't get too much publicity on it, we'll have enough to last a couple of months," said D. W. Darling, manager of the restaurant. "Right after those newspaper stories broke about the continued popularity of bean soup, it got more popular than ever," he went on, with a chuckle. "Fact of the matter is, we've almost doubled our bean business since the new session started."

But what about the Manchurian quail? Why, exactly, was it called that, and where did it come from? A simple statement answered all those questions. The quail arrived from Manchuria by special shipment some time ago; it was frozen quail and—here's the shock angle—it had been frozen for two years at least! Everybody declares it's delicious, but I decided to take a ham sandwich.

Small luncheon parties seemed to fill the Senate restaurant yesterday. Senator Barkley made the rounds of virtually all the tables, and lingered briefly for greetings here and there, but he always came back to the Smathers' party. "If the Parliament member stands me up, it's all right with me," he said. "I'll just stay on here." Half an hour later, the Britisher still had not arrived, and Senator Barkley still improving each shining moment with Mr. and Mrs. Smathers and their guests.

She Got Their Autographs . . .

Across the room Senator Cabot Lodge had a quartet of constituents in tow. Former Senator and Mrs. William H. King joined Senator Warren Barbour at his table. Senator Bob Reynolds arrived with guests. Meanwhile, at the big center table where solons without guests eat with each other, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg sat with several colleagues, all of whom were interrupted midway in the meal by an attractive women who asked all for autographs, Hollywood-fashion. They gallantly complied.

SENATOR VANDENBERG

Among the random rumors on Capitol Hill is the one that Senator E. H. Moore of Oklahoma will oppose the confirmation of Josh Lee's appointment to the Civil Aeronautics Board on the grounds that former Senator Lee, whom he defeated, is not qualified for the job because Lee and his wife once signed a pact that neither would ever ride in an airplane. . . . Looks as if Representative Margaret Smith will get a place on the Naval Affairs Committee . . . Friends of Sergeant at Arms Chesley W. Jurney are putting up a stiff fight to keep him in the job he has run since 1933, but support is increasing daily for former Senator Wall Doxey of Mississippi, who is being backed by Senator Kenneth McKellar. . . . Mrs. Robert A. Taft is one well-known Washingtonian who has solved the problem of riding to a party on the bus and still appearing in a long frock. The other evening when she and the Senator stepped out to a big-league dinner, she made her sweeping dress a short one temporarily by the simple expedient of tying a string around her waist, and drawing the skirt up under her coat.

Lieut. Clayton And Bride on Wedding Trip

Lieut. Christopher Sudlow Clayton, United States Army, and his bride, the former Miss Anna Florence Day, will leave this weekend for Texas, where the bridegroom is stationed at Camp Wolters.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Day. Their marriage took place on Tuesday in the Walter Reed Chapel in the presence of the immediate families and a few friends. Officiating at the ceremony was Chaplain John H. Donovan.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of ivory satin brocade and a train-length veil of French illusion held by a coronet of seed pearls. The prayerbook which she carried was covered with a spray bouquet of orchids and bouvardia.

Mrs. Joseph P. Parlon was her sister's matron of honor. She wore a pink damask gown and carried an old-fashioned nosegay. Bridesmaids were Miss Audrey Vogelsang and Miss Shirley Middlebrook. Their frocks were of blue faille and tulle and they carried talisman roses. Sergt. J. Donald Day was his brother's best man and ushers were N. F. Day and Thomas S. Vaughn.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents and the couple left later for a brief wedding trip.

Lieut. Tibbits, Bride, in Canada On Honeymoon

Now on a brief honeymoon in Canada are Lieut. (j. g.) Arthur Harris Tibbits, U. S. N. R., and Mrs. Tibbits, whose marriage took place on January 9 in Wellesley, Mass. The Rev. Philemon F. Sturges, jr., officiated at the ceremony in St. Andrew's Church, assisted by the Rev. John Knox Tibbits, father of the bridegroom.

The bride is the former Miss Marjorie Fitzherbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Fitzherbert of Wellesley Hills, Mass. She is a graduate of Dana Hall and the Garland School.

Anne Barrett To Become Bride Of Lieut. J. Marks

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Richard Rice Barrett of Ridgelea announces the engagement of her daughter, Anne Camden Barrett, to Lieut. John Brady Marks, Signal Corps, U. S. A., son of Myer M. Marks and the late Mrs Marks of Chicago. The wedding will take place in the near future.

Miss Barrett was graduated from the Choate School in Boston and Miss May's School in Florence, Italy.

"Life Begins at 8:30" Tops Its Recent Stage Original

Monty Woolley and Ida Lupino Score Hits In Screen Version of "Yesterday's Magic;" Cugat Orchestra a Hit on Capitol Stage

BY A RARE EXERCISE of good judgment and dramaturgic skill, Nunnally Johnson, adapter-producer of the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Life Begins at 8:30," now on view as chief screen feature for the week at Loew's Capitol Theater, has translated Emlyn Williams' tragic play of "Yesterday's Magic" into an engaging comedy-drama alive with elements of sprightly entertainment.

This he has accomplished principally by providing Monty Woolley with an acid, arrogant and, at times, amiable role that shrewdly perpetuates many of the Sheridan Whitesidean qualities of "the man who came to dinner." As the "grand old man of the theater," who had drowned a magnificent celebrity in the high-proof contents of too many bottles, the eminent gentleman familiarly identified as "The Beard" has further opportunity to demonstrate his complete mastery of acrimonious and blistering speech, which, somehow, he manages to make both agreeable and amusing. The implication of the role, as Mr. Johnson has reshaped it, is one of weakness rather than selfish egotism that culminates on a note of high humor instead of suicide—and with no loss whatever to the integrity of the story or its steadily mounting interest.

By this metamorphosis in the character of Madden Thomas, the adapter automatically has lifted the figure of the fallen actor's crippled daughter out of the reach of sentimental pity and made of her a self-reliant young woman whose only problem is meeting the emotional crisis in her own life and the professional turning point in her father's simultaneously without impairment to either. The result is a thoroughly happy study of a group of unique temperaments, instead of an intensely gloomy one.

The piece is especially well played. Woolley's portrayal of the one-time stage idol, reduced to impersonating a department store Santa Claus as the play opens, is one of nice balance between the reprehensible and the admirable in the nature of a man who has touched both the heights and the depths. Ida Lupino, as Kathi Thomas, the patient and devoted daughter, who discovers finally that she has a life of her own to live, manipulates the part successfully around the pitfalls of sentimentality and self pity, and Sara Allgood is perfect as the Madden worshiper who has dogged the star down the years in futile adoration of a great talent to be rewarded finally with one of the most outrageous proposals of marriage ever spoken by an unwilling swain. To lend point and inspiration to the plot's romantic ramifications, Cornel Wilde proves himself a young leading man amply able to take care of himself even in a cast of such seasoned veterans. Melville Cooper, J. Edward Bromberg, William Demarest and the others do ably in the less conspicuous supporting assignments.

During their hour on the stage, Xavier Cugat and his instrumentalists, singers and specialists present an uninterrupted interval of rhythmic excellence. This Latin-American orchestra, of course, is the foremost of its kind before the American public. It is, if anything, better than ever this time around, fortified as it is by the maestro's solo violining, Lina Romay's singing, De La Cruz's ditto, Raul and Eva Reyes, for the dancing, and the experts on the South American drums and marachas. Tossed into the colorful and enlivening ensemble, for the purposes of monologistic and slightly "corny" comedy, is Johnny Burke with his time-honored recital of the experiences of a doughboy in the last World War. It still keeps an audience convulsed—even the parts in questionable taste.

The Fox Movietone News and Art Brown's organized community sing are the final complements of a bill that wins high entertainment rating by its uniform superiority and sharp contrasts.

Fiery Action Marks Progress Of 'Forest Rangers,' at Palace

By Ernest L. Schier

When two high-powered females clash in the rugged out-of-doors over a single strong-and-silent man it would be unnatural if the sparks didn't fly. Which is exactly what happens in "The Forest Rangers," but with a fury that also ignites two of the most spectacular fires ever screened, with the added advantage of a Technicolor treatment that does justice to the females, the fire and the general grandeur of a location that looks suspiciously like the Yellowstone National Park, though the exact site remains anonymous.

In filming the current Palace Theater attraction, Paramount has topped the usual escapist formula with a mixture of romance, comedy, music and melodrama expertly blended. There are deft touches to the lighter side of the film which give it an originality that is commendable, while the dramatic moments are well sustained with a plausible story that revolves about the preservation of our great natural timber reserves, in the face of carelessness and pyromaniacs.

Minus a formal dedication, the very nature of the picture pays tribute to the Forest Ranger Service and the perilous tasks their duty leads them to perform.

As Don Stuart, Chief of the Rangers, Fred MacMurray is put on the trail of a dangerous criminal when he uncovers a clue that indicates a deliberately-set blaze. The suspects are numbered among a group of mill owners, any of whom stand to profit from the purchase of the cheapened land.

A Fourth of July celebration in town leads Stuart smack into another menace—this one to his heart—in the form of stunning Paulette Goddard, who, parading as a dude rancher, bowls the hardy mountaineer over with her horse. When she naively inquires, "What have I done?" the Ranger looks deep into her eyes and replies, "You wouldn't believe me if I told you."

A quick marriage brings the girl from the East face to face with her two rivals, the forest and a girl mill-owner who had marked Stuart for her own. When these two meet they make the blazing timber look like a cozy hearth fire compared to the trouble they set off.

Abetting the romantic moments are two songs, the first "Jingle, Jangle, Jingle," which has already cut a notch in the hit parade, and "Tall Grows the Timber," which is sung by MacMurray in appropriate sequence.

Between dousing the flames of the forest and pacifying the pair of minxes, Fred MacMurray keeps occupied throughout the film in a most engaging manner. Even disguised by smudge and soot Miss Goddard is both beautiful and an excellent comedienne. Fiery Susan Hayward is the third member of the triangle.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Jan. 14.

The loading and transporting of the vessels which participated in the invasion of Africa not only was the best-kept secret of the war but also was one of the most brilliant organization jobs in history. Most of that armada was loaded in Britain. And one of the loading points was Liverpool . . . In that city, the dock-workers presented a problem. They expressed resentment over this job and deemed it a waste of ships and labor. Officials conferred and listened to their complaints. "Why should all this be sent by sea," the workers insisted, "when it could so easily be sent by rail" . . . But this was one job in which their was not to reason why—even though the precious cargo all was labeled—destination "Bristol."

EUGENE O'NEILL

The United States Army now includes a corporal who participated in the evacuation from Dunkirk. He's Corpl. Paul James Martin, stationed at Fort Hamilton. He was with the French army in '40 . . . Eugene O'Neill's plays will not be shown here for one year. O'Neill says that next year we will be near enough to victory for him to venture the presentation of his new works . . . The Ranee of Sarawak, who flew back to England was told that although she was able to stay up late each night in the New York cafes, she wasn't strong enough to do Red Cross work. The Ranee therefore has organized her personal canteen, cooking for her United States Army friends.

Mayor LaGuardia, who still persists in concluding each of his municipal broadcasts with the rallying-cry, "Patience and Fortitude," was visited at his city hall office by Boro President Cashmore of Brooklyn . . . With LaGuardia at the time were Newbold Morris, president of the city council, and Joe McGoldrick, the comptroller. Cashmore, greeted Fiorello: "Hello, Mr. Mayor," then turned to LaGuardia's two aids and asked: "How's Patience? And how's Fortitude?"

Louis Ruppel, the newspaper man who recently became Tom Beck's assistant at Collier's, is leaving within two weeks. He's being commissioned as a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps and soon will start his combat training . . . Lawrence Langer of the Theater Guild carefully has filed all the letters he received from George Bernard Shaw in preparation for his publication . . . Martin Gabel, of the producing firm of Wharton & Gable, entered the Army today as a private . . . Jimmy Truex, actor-son of Actor Ernest Truex, has been accepted by the Navy to study Japanese. He goes to Colorado to start mastering the hieroglyphics.

When General Montgomery, the leader of Britain's Eighth Army, was at prep-school he was nicknamed "The Monkey." His class book includes this description of him: "The Monkey. This intelligent animal makes its nest in football fields, football vests and other such accessible resorts. It is vicious, of unflagging energy and much feared by neighboring animals, owing to a tendency of trying to pull out the top hair of the head. To foreign funa it shows no mercy, stamping on their heads and twisting their necks and doing many other inconceivable atrocities, with a view, no doubt, to proving its patriotism. To hunt this animal is a dangerous undertaking. Even if caught, he is not good eating."

The "Women Can Take It" show at the Rivoli will be presented without the services of the male who directed it—Nat Karson, who must report to his draft board . . . Arthur Lesser, proprietor of La Vie Parisienne, is spreading to greener pastures. He's opening an additional East Side cafe

Cooper Counts Cost of Ceiling!

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 14.—The only thing holding up Gary Cooper's signature to do "Saratoga Trunk" is how he's going to sign a contract which calls for $150,000 for one picture, when the government says he can only have $67,000. His lawyer doesn't know; Washington won't tell him. But if the situation can be clarified, Gary will definitely do the picture with Ingrid Bergman. And don't be surprised if that fine actress Flora Robson plays the mulatto. Sam Wood is champing at the bit to get started, because back in New York everybody was saying to him, "Come on, make some escapist pictures!" And what could be better than having Gary and Bergman teamed again in a fascinating love story? . . . Could Acquanetta be moving in on Lois Andrew's territory? Well, she paid a visit to Lionel Newman at Twentieth the other day when Lois wasn't around . . . Since Alan Ladd is army bound, does that mean Sonny Tufts and George Reeve will get the fine parts all set for Alan? . . . Keenan Wynn arrived to play in the Kay Kyser picture.

GARY COOPER

Should 'a' Been a Pie!

It wasn't funny to onlookers when Charles Laughton finished a scene in "This Land of Mine," fell exhausted into a chair, sent his hired man hot-footing it to the commissary for a bowl of custard, then asked him to feed it to him with a spoon—which he did. Too bad Mack Sennett wasn't there. He'd have shown the hired man what to do with it . . . Orson Welles' three secretaries have now become accustomed to his antics and the trained rats playing hide and seek in the office. One of them told me the other day that unless she had a rat sitting up on the desk with her she felt a little lonely. But guests who drop in are not amused.

Shadow and Substance

The well dressed Billy Gaxton arrived in town, to be met at the station by his old pal and sidekick, Victor Moore. As soon as Bill finishes "Best Foot Forward," he goes across town to do another one for Columbia, after which he and Victor scramble back to Broadway for another show. Billy's lost 20 pounds, Moore's gained 20. But Moore's in love, and they say that always makes for contentment . . . Bandleader Harry James put his best footforward with Helen Forrest at the Palladium the other night. He was seen by a spy; so now Harry's lined up to do a jitterbug with Lucille Ball.

Holds Beacon High

The luncheon RKO gave honoring Sister Kenny turned out to be an occasion which each guest was honored to attend. Sister Kenny's talk was a sermon. Her quiet power moved every one. The text could have been that any ideal can always be realized thru untiring work and sound planning. Briefly she outlined her 30 years of struggle against almost insuperable obstacles. She added that she had never had any great desire to have her story filmed until, thru the complete understanding of Writer Mary McCarthy, Rosalind Russell, and the studio, she saw what farreaching good it might do. She hopes the studio will not lose on the picture, but her real hope is that it will be shown thruout the world, in hamlets and villages as well as metropolitan centers, so that fathers and mothers everywhere will take hope and know that their children, even the victims of infantile paralysis, need not be casualties.

Director E. H. Griffith picked up my suggestion about Fred Astaire doing a musical of Noel Coward's "Private Lives," but he'd like to add Ginger Rogers and Bob Hope. And how about that for a combination? I can think of nothing to beat it . . . Letters arriving at this desk protest Walter Pidgeon's donning a beard to play Papa Curie opposite Greer Garson in the life of Mme. Curie. Now that they've chosen Walter for their romance, fans like his chin hairless. He's got a good chin, say they, and why not show it?

Impeach 'Bureaucrats,' Cox Demands

By the Associated Press

Representative Cox of Georgia, ranking Democrat on the Rules Committee, demanded in the House yesterday that impeachment proceeding be instituted against unidentified Government officials.

He refused to amplify a half-minute speech in which he demanded the action, but predicted speedy Rules Committee approval of a resolution to investigate the Federal Comm.unications Commission, headed by James L. Fly.

"You can draw your own inferences," he told reporters.

"The time has come," the Georgian told the House, "for this House to protect itself and the country against the scorn, the abuse and the dictatorship of the bureaucrats by resorting to the process of impeachment."

Cox and Fly long have been at odds.

During the day Marcus Cohn, counsel of the FCC, denounced as "unsupported innuendoes and insinuations" the charges made by attorneys for an Albany, Ga., radio station that commission investigators were more interested in trying to "get something on" Representative Cox than they were in the station's business.

Cohn said that failure of the radio station's records to show that Arthur Lucas and W. K. Jenkins, Georgians who operate several theatrical enterprises, had an interest as stockholders in the broadcasting company operating station WALB had prompted the commission's inquiry, now in its fourth day of hearings.

H. T. McIntosh, president of the Albany Herald Publishing Co. and the Albany Herald Broadcasting Co., had testified that $2500 was paid Cox, in whose district Albany lies, for legal services he could render "in an ethical and legal manner" which would not be in conflict with his office as a Congressman.

[Cox last night told The Post that the $2500 check was indorsed and sent back by him and there was then sent to him stock in a new corporation "which never has functioned" and that he transferred the stock to a "private charity."

[The House Rules Committee, he said, will report on Monday a resolution calling for investigation of the FCC by a special House committee. He predicted that the resolution would pass the House the following day and that there would "not be 20 votes against it."—Editor's Note.]

Delacey Allen, lawyer for WALB, told FCC Examiner Don Harris that he felt his previous charge that the commission was primarily interested in "getting something on" Cox was supported while Cohn contended that his statements as to the reason for the hearing answered Allen's allegations.

At one point, Allen asked McIntosh:

"I ask you if I ever made the charge to them (two FCC investigators) that they wanted to use the $2560 check to embarrass Judge Cox, and whether they denied that?"

McIntosh replied: "I recall that statement, but I do not recall any denial. They said they were not at liberty to discuss the matter."

Girl's Hair Burned By Fiery Pillow

Miss Eula Castenova, 23, of 1327 Harvard Street Northwest, was taken to Casualty Hospital last night suffering from burns about the forehead incurred when the pillow on which she was resting caught fire at her home.

Firemen said her hair caught fire from the blazing pillow and she ran, screaming, about her room until the fire was extinguished by other roomers.

Firemen were uncertain as to how the fire started.

D.A.R. 1943 Congress To Be in Cincinnati

The Daughters of the American Revolution announced yesterday that the fifty-second Continental Congress would be held at Cincinnati, Ohio, from April 17 to 21.

This is the second time since the start of the war the organization has held its annual session outside the Capital, meeting last year at Chicago. The announcement said the D. A. R. decided to meet again outside of the city "rather than add to the congestion in the Nation's Capital," where the society's headquarters are located.

Jap Invasion Still Threat, Grew Warns

Japan's "overweening ambition eventually to invade and conquer the United States" will be limited only by time if we allow the Nipponese to dig in and fortify their newly won positions in the Pacific, Joseph C. Grew, former Ambassador to Japan, warned yesterday.

His oft-voiced admonition was made before the Federal Bar Association at its weekly luncheon in the Harrington Hotel, where a distinguished audience listened attentively as the tall, handsome and eloquent diplomat told his story of a war-mad Japan whose lust for power makes her potentially stronger, he said, than either the United States or Great Britain.

The story was the same which Grew has related on many occasions since returning to this country aboard the exchange ship Gripsholm, but his presence lent added emphasis to the envoy's most frequently repeated point, delivered with hammer-blow conviction, that the United States can never return to the "paths of peace" in the Pacific until Japan is completely and ruthlessly crushed.

In that part of his "off the record" speech which he allowed reporters to quote, Grew expressed regret that the press had "sensationalized" a section of the State Department's recent "Peace and War" report which showed that he had warned, on January 27, 1941, of the possibility of a Japanese attack in force on Pearl Harbor. The same report, Grew said, also showed that three days earlier, on January 24, 1941, Navy Secretary Knox had advised Secretary of War Stimson of the same possibility and advised him to take every precaution against such a happening.

"I make this statement," Grew said, "in a spirit of fair play."

He defended as "just good plain common sense" the United States policy of selling oil and scrap to Japan in the decade that preceded Pearl Harbor.

No nation, the speaker declared, should make any threat against any other country unless it is prepared to go to war to make good its threat. That would have been the position of the United States, Grew said, if we had threatened to cut off oil and scrap shipments at a time when we were not prepared, physically or psychologically, for "a two-front war with a one-ocean Navy."

Among those who listened to the former Ambassador was his daughter, Mrs. Robert English, who returned here Wednesday after a two-year stay in Wellington, New Zealand, where her husband is in the United States Diplomatic Service.

Prior to Grew's address, several distinguished guests were introduced. Significantly, the audience reserved its greatest applause—an ovation in fact—for unsmiling Maj. Gen. Chu, aide of China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Anaconda Faces Second Fraud Action

Attorney General Biddle announced yesterday that a Federal grand jury at Providence, R. I., had indicted the Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. of Pawtucket, R. I., and five individuals on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government and present false claims in connection with wire and cable produced for the United States and British armies.

The indictment, as made public by the Justice Department, alleged that defective and untested wire and cable had been shipped to the fighting forces as a result of a deliberate policy of evasion of inspection.

A similar charge was placed December 21 by a Federal grand jury at Fort Wayne, Ind., against the Anaconda Wire and Cable Co. of Marion, Ind. Both companies are in a group of eight plants controlled by Anaconda Copper Mining Co.

William H. Morley of New York, assistant general manager of all Anaconda mills and former manager of the Pawtucket plant;

Jacobson Eagleson of Pawtucket, manager of the plant since Morley was promoted last April 6;

Lowell K. Morrow of Pawtucket, chief inspector at the plant;

Robert L. Wright of Pawtucket, electrical engineer of the plant until his resignation last June 5, and William Eagleson of Pawtucket, a brother of Jacob Eagleson, supervisor in the electrical test room.

The Government charged that the conspiracy resulted in the production and delivery to the British War Ministry and the United States Army Signal Corps of inferior and defective wire and cable, which was intended to be used for military purposes."

Justice Department officials said more than one million dollars of wire and cable contracts were involved.

The indictment alleged that the conspiracy to circumvent inspection tests went back to November, 1940, and continued to last September 1.

Carrier's Last Flight

Wilson High Boy Pictures Hornet's End

Thrilling an audience of former Wilson High School classmates, Jimmy Ahearn, 19, yesterday told them of the exploits of the aircraft carrier, Hornet on which he served. He advised his friends to wait until they graduated before enlisting, pointing out that those with education serve best.

Jimmy left school in May, 1941, and joined the Navy. He served on the Hornet, which was sunk at the battle of Santa Cruz, from the time she was commissioned. He was aboard in the three great battles of Midway, Coral Sea and Santa Cruz.

So interesting was Jimmy's account of the Santa Cruz battle that it prompted pretty Jane Peters, Wilson High senior, to interview him. The following is part of her story:

"Fear was not in the minds of any of the boys as they fought off five Jap attacks during the battle of Santa Cruz. You're too busy trying to get the Japs to worry about danger to yourself. You've been trained for the job and you do it automatically. It is only afterward when you think back and wonder how you ever came out alive. The whole gang was swell and fought it down. They're the squarest guys anywhere.

"At the signal to stand by to repel attack, you grab any gun you can find and wait until they get in close. Most of the carrier's planes were out on a mission so there was little chance to fight back.

"One man took up a position amidships where he was vulnerable to attack from all sides. The whole time he was shooting at Japs, he was worrying because his dress blues were out on the line. He said he sure did hope they dropped their bombs at the other end, so his blues wouldn't get wet."

"During the battle Jimmy manned a machine gun, checked armament, and fought fires while Jap Zeros' dive-bombers strafed the carrier. After 10 hours of valiant fighting, the order to abandon ship was given. Jimmy jumped overboard and swam for 15 minutes on oil-coated waters until he was picked up by a destroyer. He wasn't worrying about sharks, but officers on the destroyer were shooting at them as he swam toward the ship.

"Back in the States for the first time in a year Jimmy says that it sure is a good place to be. None of his old gang is here at Wilson now, just their kid brothers and sisters.

"Jimmy was a typical Wilson boy before he quit school to join the Navy. He was a fraternity man, one of the best jitterbugs in the city, had a part-time job, got F's on his report card and would fight with anyone who got tough.

"Jimmy plans to stay in Washington for two more weeks. When asked what he is going to do, he replied, "Well I've got a girl.'"

OPA-Hecht Price Ceiling Hearing Begins

A broad test of the reasonableness of the regulations issued by the Office of Price Administration began in the District Court yesterday before Justice F. D. Dickinson Letts.

The OPA has accused the Hecht Co. department store of violating the price ceiling rules by overcharges and failure to post schedules of prices. Evidence of the prices of particular articles was being offered yesterday, at the close of the first day of the hearing.

Attorney Spencer Gordon, who appeared for the store, told Justice Letts that he would show that some of the OPA charges were unfounded and that instead of violating the rules the store had done everything it could to obey them.

Gordon said the store was spending $110,000 a year for a staff of 28 persons to do nothing but attend to compliance with the OPA regulations.

The first witnesses called by the OPA were Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president of the Hecht Co., and L. G. Etelson, who is in charge of the store's price control staff.

The hearing is expected to take a week.

WAVE Recruit Keeps Family Navy Tradition

A cousin of the first American naval officer to die in action in the World War and daughter of a naval ensign in that same war,

MISS BARKER

Katherine Barker, 21, of 3811 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest, carries the Navy traditions of her family into the war today when she leaves as an officer candidate for the WAVES' training center at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

Miss Barker attended Woodrow Wilson High School here and is a graduate of the University of Maryland, class of 1942 and a member of Kappa Delta sorority.

Lieut. Stanton Kalk, whose portrait hangs with those of other naval heroes at the Navy Department, is the cousin whose naval career began the desire for naval duty in the Barker family.

Two United States destroyers have been named after Lieut. Kalk. The first was traded to Great Britain for West Indies defense bases and the second, launched in July last year, is now a ship of the line.

Miss Barker's father Howard F. Barker, was an ensign during the last war and served as aid here to Admiral T. J. Cowie. He is chief accountant at the Tariff Commission. Miss Barker's mother, Mrs. Margaret McRae Barker, is a teacher at Jefferson Junior High School.

Strike Cuts D. C. Coal Supply, But Outlook Still Is Good

Although present coal stocks in the District were somewhat lower than requirements, due to labor shortages and the existing strike among miners in the anthracite field, the situation could not be considered "bad" nor could the future supply be looked upon with anything but optimism, it was stated yesterday by A. P. Brown, chairman of the coal committee for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

He cited the present strike among anthracite miners as cutting down Washington's daily supply of this type of fuel probably 100 tons a day—about one-twelfth of the normal daily supply. He admitted there might be some dealers in Washington entirely without certain sizes of anthracite coal, but added that suitable substitutes could be found for all sizes among local dealers.

Sure of Settlement

Brown was confident the strike would be settled within several days and believed that when the miners would return to work on a six-day basis instead of the present five-day week it would increase Washington's coal supply by at least 15 per cent.

When asked about persons converting from oil to coal he said that if a great number of these conversions were made suddenly the situation might become serious, but added that at the present rate of conversions there is nothing to worry about.

Brown said that one of the difficulties being experienced in the industry at the present time is people becoming unnecessarily panicky about the situation and calling several dealers simultaneously for coal delivery, hoping that one of them would be able to fill the need. As a result, he said, deliveries are duplicated and hours lost. He appealed to the public to cancel all but one order accepted by dealers.

Fuel Oil Unchanged

On the fuel oil front the situation apparently remained unchanged with fuel oil dealers working on a day-to-day basis as far as their incoming supplies are concerned. The larger primary suppliers reported anywhere from a two to four day supply on hand and most of them expressed the belief that more would be forthcoming before their present supplies were exhausted.

District OPA Director Whitney Leary, while admitting that present supplies did not permit a margin of safety in the event of extreme cold weather, expressed satisfaction with the results of recent efforts made by his office to get more fuel into Washington.

Recommendations

Meanwhile Lester Scott, fuel oil spokesman for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, who appeared Wednesday before a Senate committee investigating the fuel oil situation, said yesterday that at the request of the Senate committee he was drawing up a set of recommendations on the fuel oil situation which he expected to submit to the committee late today or early tomorrow.

Scott said that in his recommendations he would let the "chips fall where they will" and they would be centered around his recommendations of several weeks ago that a committee be formed representing the three Government agencies closely associated with the fuel oil situation, namely OPA, ODT and PAW, to handle future rationing."
